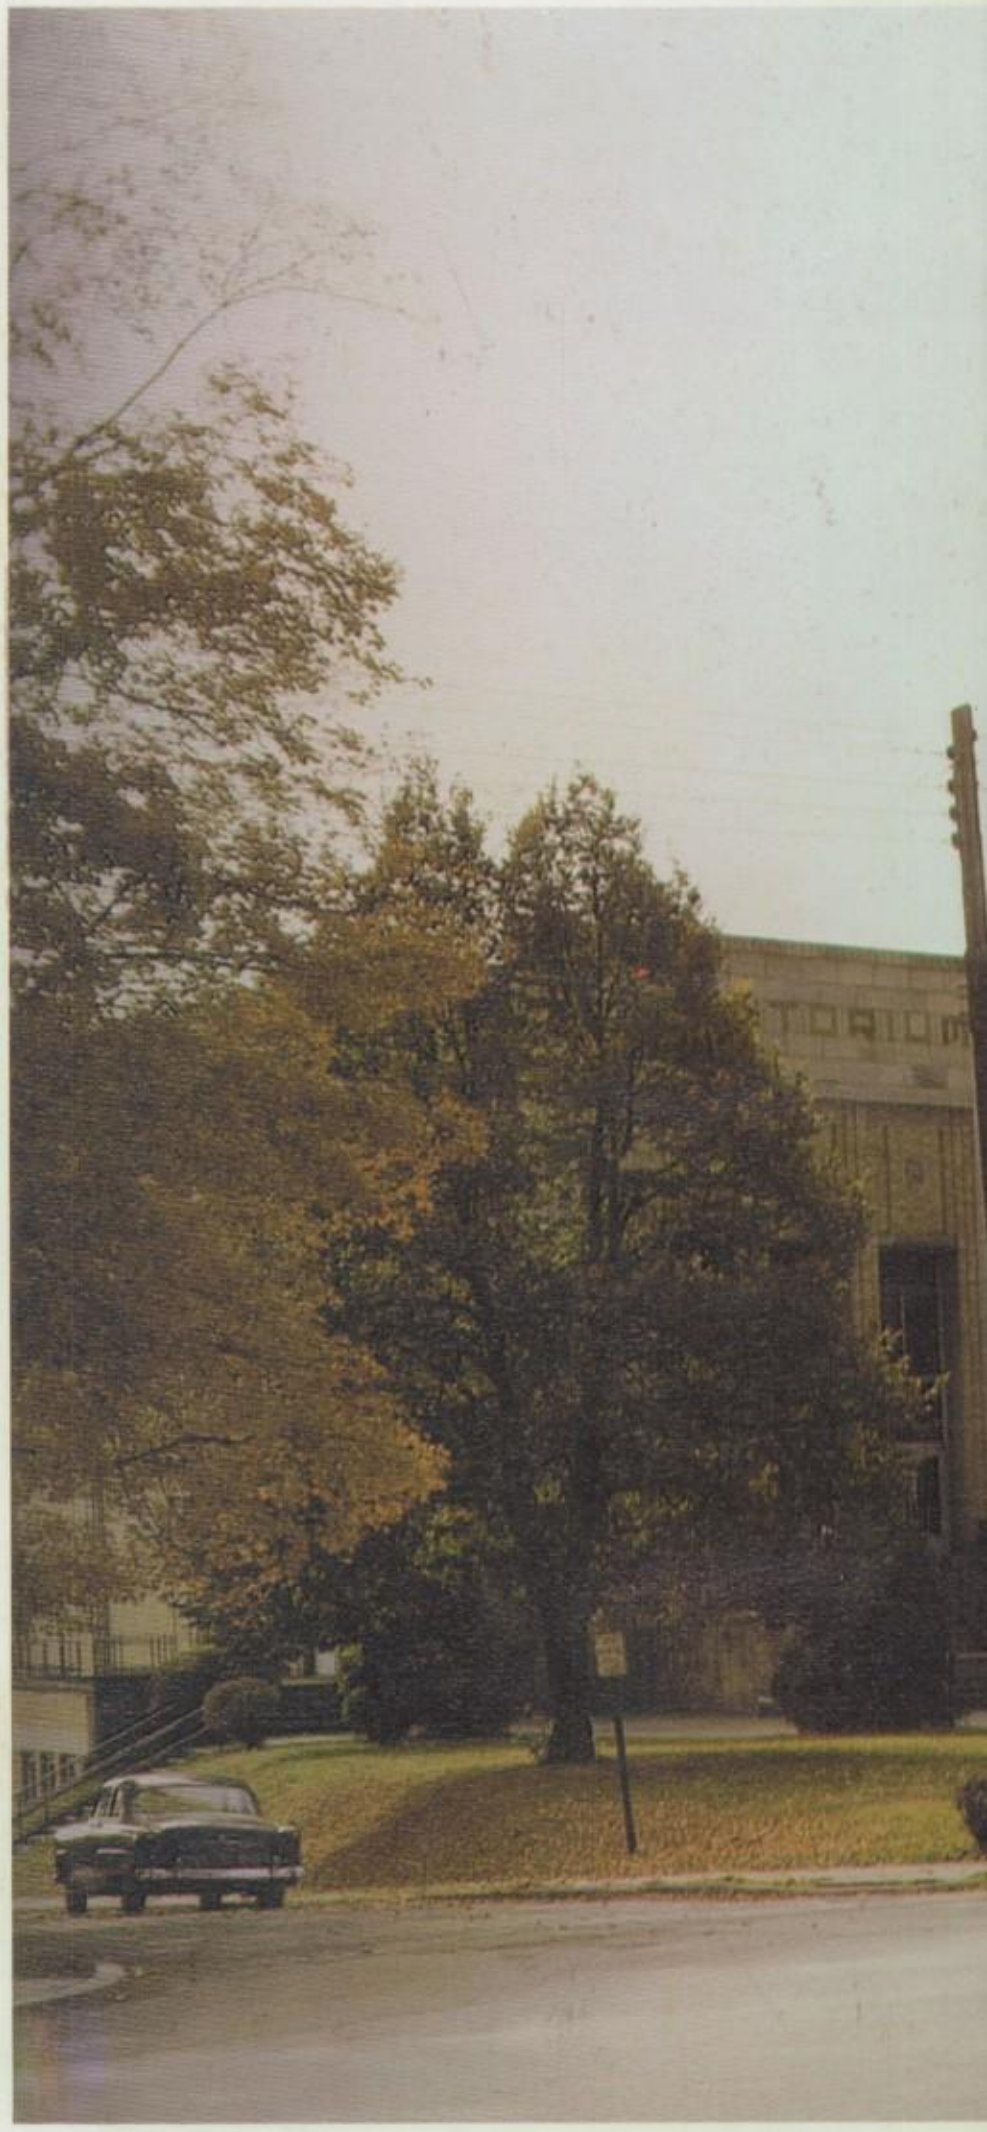
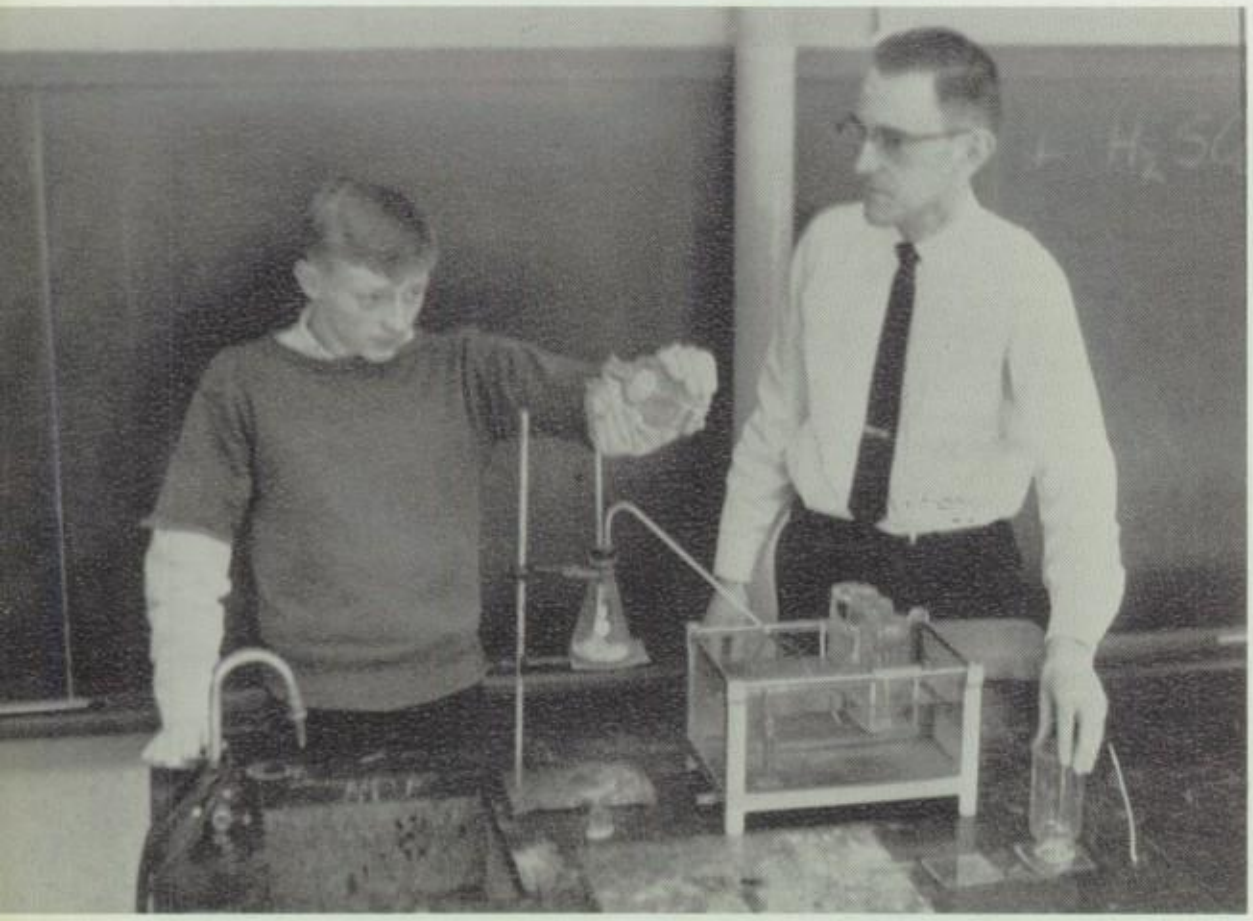
JAMESTOWN HIGH SCHOOL

VOLUME 63 JAMESTOWN, NEW YORK



This is Jamestown High School. It is a crowded, busy building, the scene of many experiences. Here we all know some triumphs, some failures. Yet the lessons we learn, the people we meet, the events we share within its walls are important to both our present and future. The rewards of high school are many in number.

We Come With Spirit, Curiosity, And A Bit Of Fear



Dave Carlson seeks knowledge as he tries out a chemistry experiment with Mr. Carlson.

Arrival: Sophomores enter into their first day at Jamestown High School.

J.H.S. students are enthusiastic, as can be proven at any basketball game.

Sophomore Debbie Cherry experiences one of high school's embarrassing moments—dropping books in the hall.

Feeling both proud and a bit timid, we face the seemingly enormous building and wide corridors of J.H.S. as sophomores. But time does not allow this initial fright to remain. In a matter of weeks, each of us rushes pell-mell into a whirl of activity—football games, club meetings, athletic workouts, play rehearsals, and innumerable eighth periods. In class, teachers assign mountains of homework, and then urge us to go beyond textbooks in extra study. As new facts are presented to us, we find that new interests develop too. Nights in the library and homework sessions into the early morn often result. Leisure time becomes rare as we seek to fit every necessary activity into 24 hours. In no time, we are using every hour for all it is worth, spending our energy in a multitude of activities, and growing up rapidly in the process.

Here We Enjoy Meaningful

It's 3:00, and students leave school to go many different places with friends.

Friendships

Friends are with us at all sorts of times: When lessons present problems, and when we're sharing jokes, too.

There's a special kind of warmth generated by that friend who smiles a cheery greeting in the corridor, shouts wildly over a football victory with you, or shares the latest homeroom gossip. Giggling, or sympathetically listening to our problems, high school pals can mean a great deal to us.

Friendships gained are molding influences in our high school years. As we mature and our minds awaken to deeper, more probing thoughts, the voicing of our innermost feelings develops our character. It is in our close friends that we choose to confide. In a real sense, a true friend is a part of us.

Just as we share with each other our deepest woes and concerns, so we also pass some of our most exuberant moments with our pals. Crazy practical jokes, special trips and events, singing 'round a piano—these are all little times made more memorable because they're done in company.

The time of our lives is due in a large part to those friends who join us in our high school experiences. Truly, they are the ones who make those moments worth having. There is no argument against it: "A friend is a gift you give yourself."

A beaming smile lights up Janice Mohr's face as she is presented her diploma by Mr. Anderson.

J.H.S. Halls

Rewarding high school experiences are not limited to a small circle of persons. Each and every student enrolled at J.H.S. leaves with knowledge, skills, and personal understanding he did not have upon entrance.

For some, these rewards are tangible. Scholarship winners, top athletes, beauty queens, and outstanding leaders are known by all for their achievements. Yet, all of us have moments when pride rises within us. For some, passing a final examination in a difficult subject is a moment of triumph. And for all, graduation diplomas are prized as symbols of success.

While we are at J.H.S., every day has its rewards. In opportunities for fun, as in hard work, our days are rich. Learning from success and failure, praise and embarrassment, we mature both as students and as people.

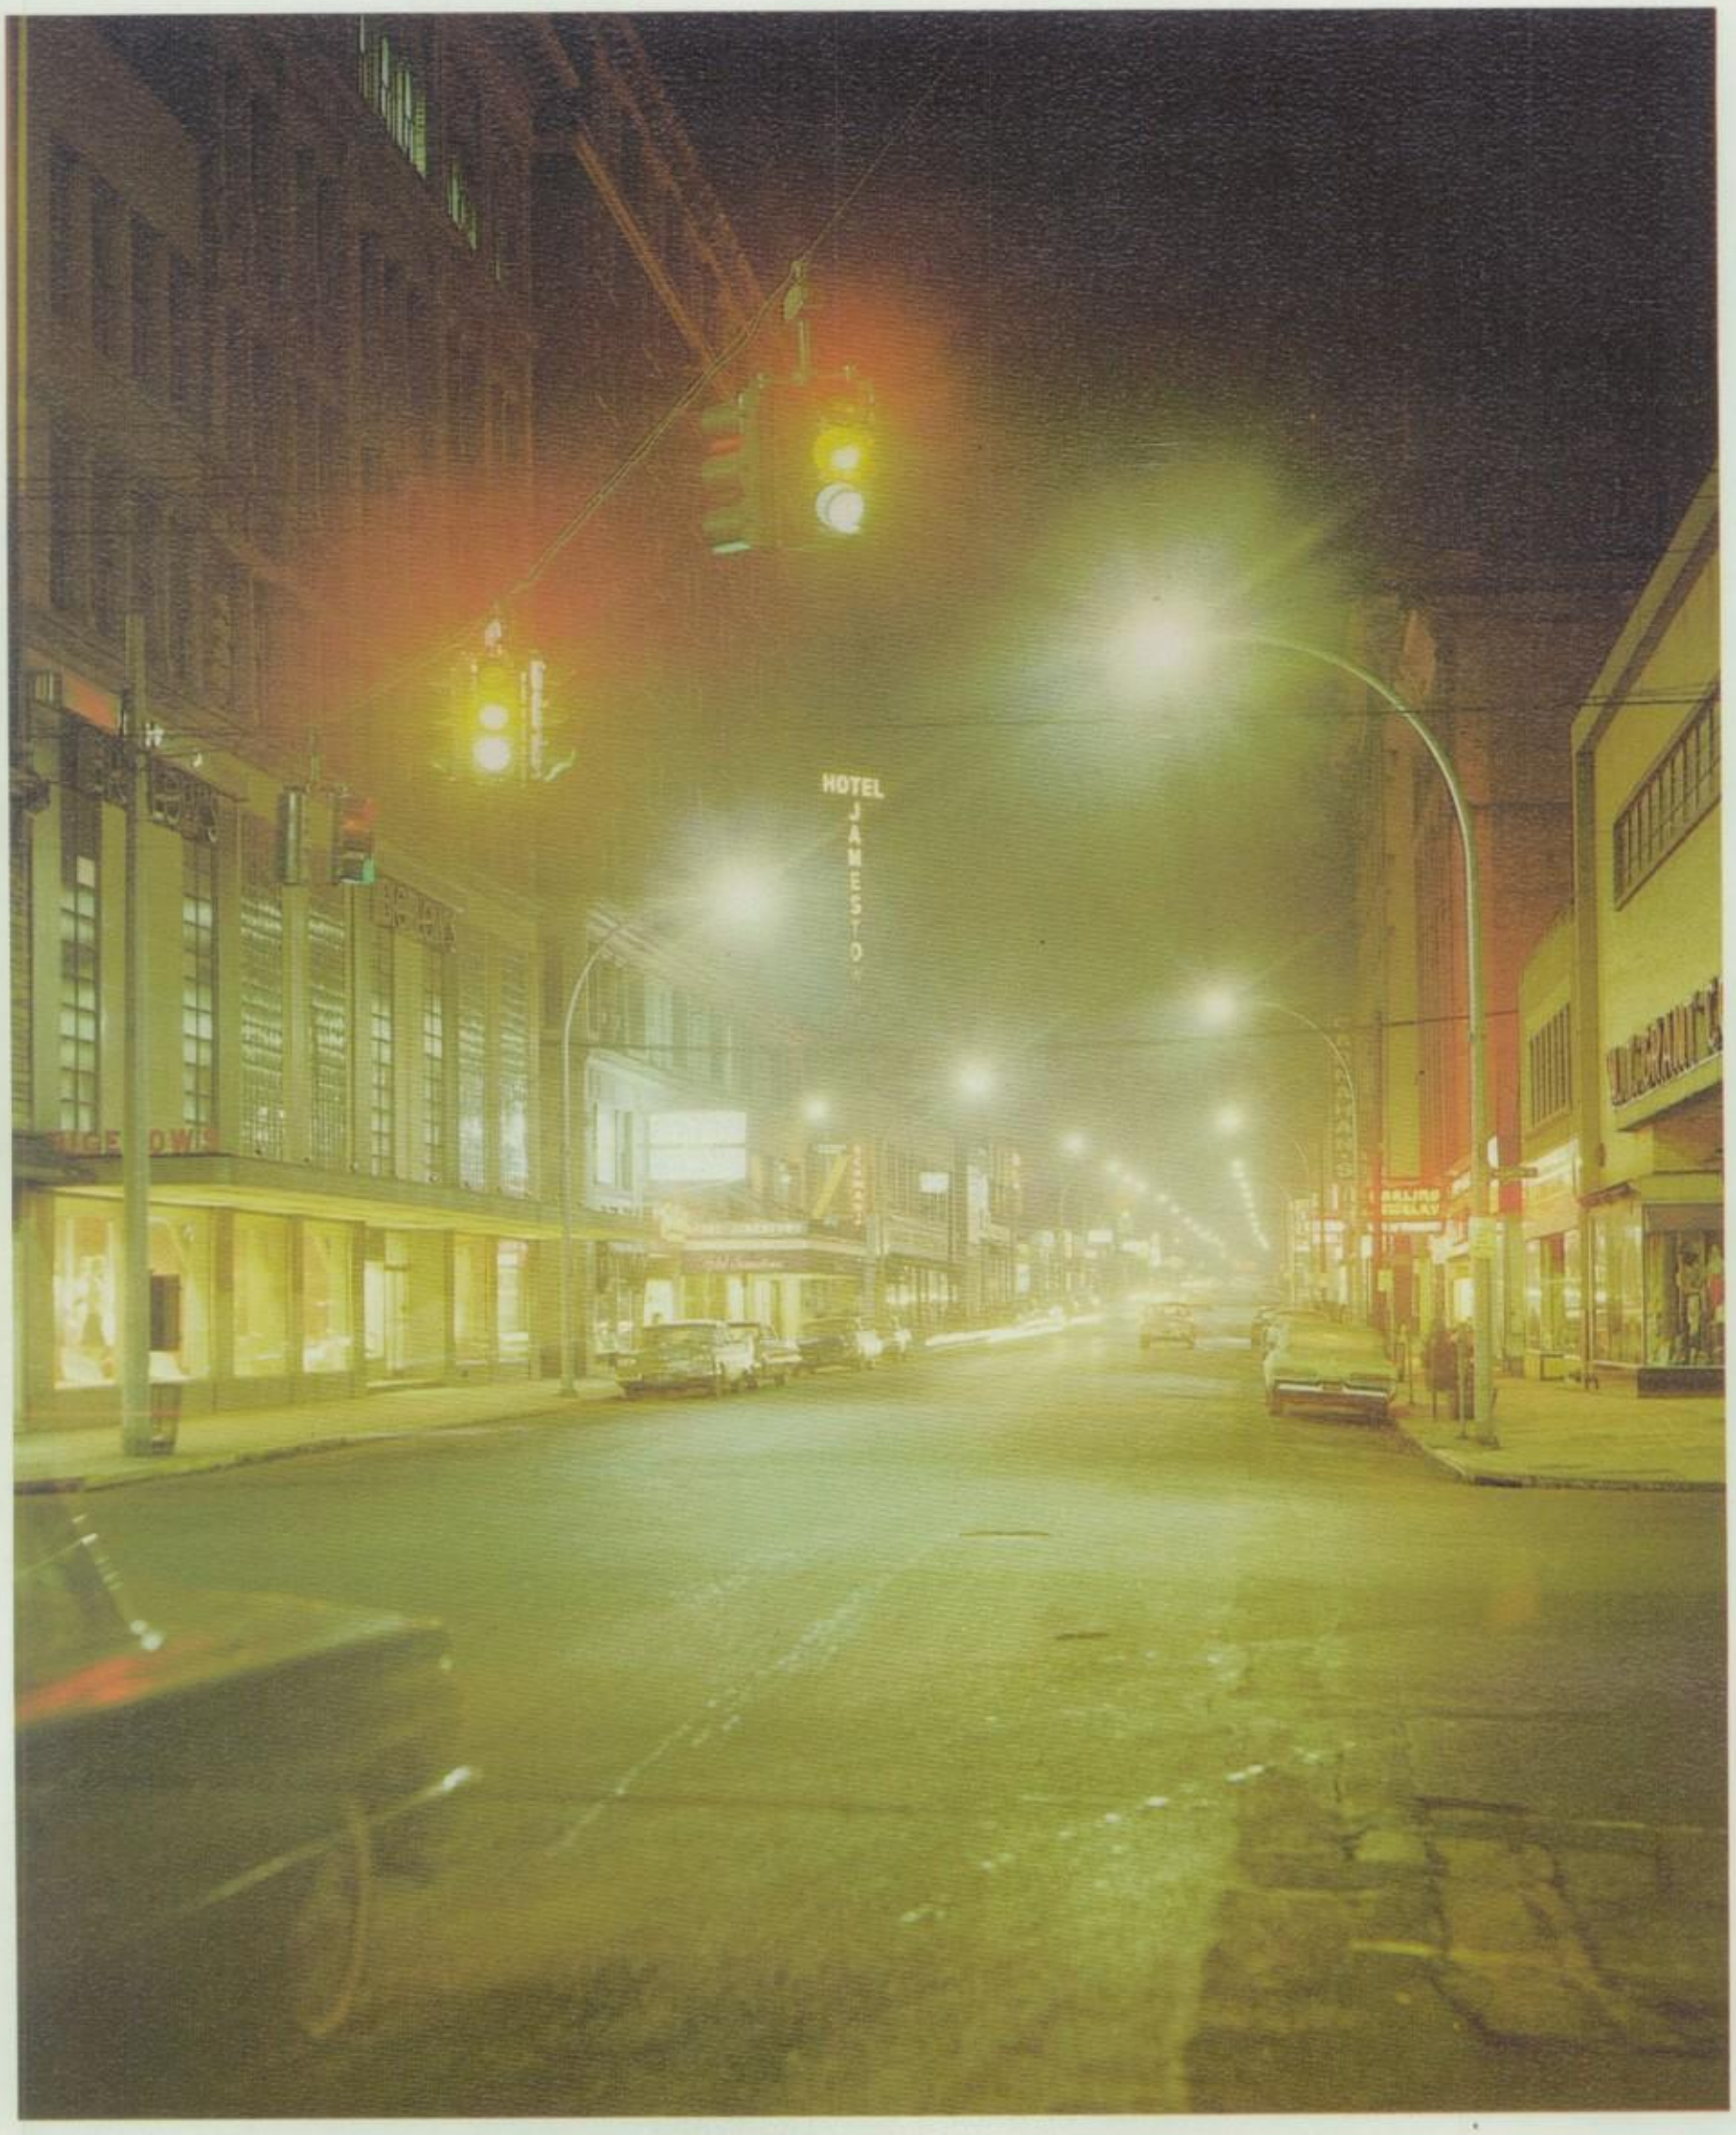
Each in his own

Times when we play crazy pranks, such as finding stale sandwiches in the cafeteria, are memorable parts of J.H.S. life.

Recall Wonderful Moments

way, students enjoy a basketball game.

A good report card! When a student receives one, there is cause for joy.



Neighboring streets, familiar halls,
A crowded public library—
These are places we know well.
Here we study, laugh, work and play,
Learning to better know both ourselves and others.

Board, Superintendent Coordinate School Policy

DR. HAROLD O'NEAL
Superintendent of Schools

To insure students schools in which excellent facilities and curricula are provided, Jamestown citizens look confidently to their Board of Education. The seven board members, seeking to serve well the people who elect them, continue to put new and better programs into effect each year.

Recently the Board has made several important decisions regarding an expansion program for Jamestown High School. They supervised remodeling of the cafeteria, in which increased seating space now enables more students to eat lunch at once, and to eat in more comfortable surroundings. Also, as a part of the year's business agenda, they have approved architectural plans for a large building addition, on which construction begins this spring.

Dr. Harold O'Neal, Superintendent of Schools, joined the Jamestown school system in 1963. A native Texan, he received Bachelors' and Masters' Degrees from Texas Christian University, and his doctorate from Indiana University. Dr. O'Neal oversees school policy in all 13 local schools. He is assisted by Bert W. Furman, coordinator of finances, Robert K. Howe, assistant superintendent, Burdell Cotten, coordinator of secondary education, and Allison Galbraith, coordinator of elementary education.

Administrators' Days Filled With Work

Concerned closely with all the matters involved in managing our high school are three hard-working, duty-minded men—our administrators. Days for them are long and rarely is a moment left open for them to relax. Their tasks are many; their ways of dealing with them always wise.

Principal Meade Anderson takes overall charge in matters of school policy. He seeks constantly to see J.H.S. curriculum and activities expand, and hopes the school always will grow more diversified in what it offers, both to students and to prospective teachers.

Ernest Levin is a very busy assistant principal. Each day he spends time in every corner of the building as a supervisor of such varied items as the cafeteria, auditorium events, and evening events. To add to his already crowded schedule, Mr. Levin was called in February to Washington where he was a member of a government committee on education and welfare.

Rolland Taft, Jamestown High's other assistant principal, handles his work from the school attendance office. In charge of all discipline and attendance questions, Mr. Taft finds his a hard job but one which is satisfying when he can help someone. Other duties, such as setting up the June exam schedule, keep him occupied every hour of the day.

Secretaries Important To J.H.S. Program

Hard work of secretaries in our school offices is extremely valuable to total school life. Typing letters, answering phones, and preparing notices, they help school affairs move along more smoothly. These women capably handle many duties, and thus provide services that keep things in top order.

Medical Workers Constantly Busy

MRS. EDITH MILLER

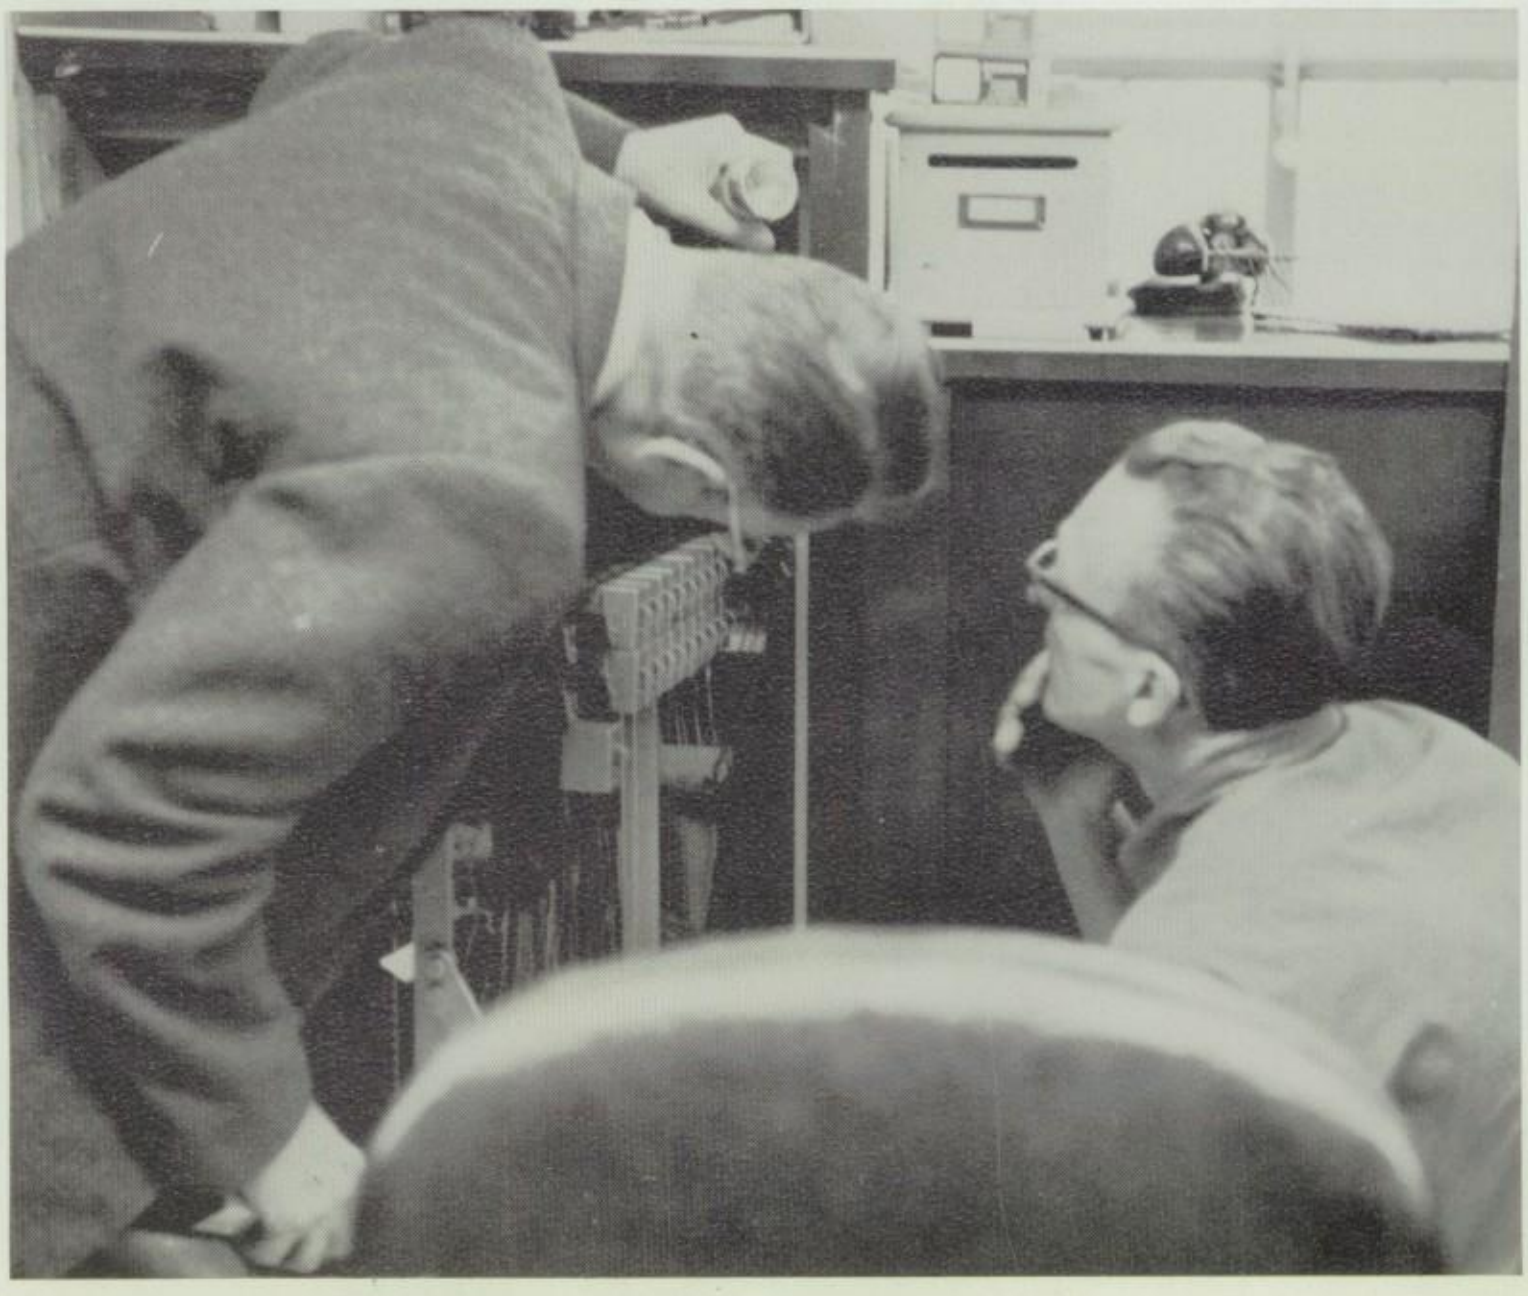
MRS. JACQUELINE SMITH

Approximately 25 to 30 students find their way to the medical office daily, either for first aid assistance or eye-ear inspection tests. The two nurses, considering it a slow day when 18 people come for first-aid services alone, are always prepared to provide the best in medical care for the student when he becomes a temporary patient.

Seventeen hours a day, maintenance workers are on duty at J.H.S., seeing to it that the building and grounds remain in top order. Working in two shifts, one from 6 A. M. to 3 P. M., and the other from 3 to 11 P. M., workers face the difficult task of cleaning each room and hall on all four floors, making many repairs to equipment, shoveling walks, mowing lawns, doing many jobs that keep J.H.S. the well-functioning learning center that it is. Indeed, we owe a lot to the men and women who do this important work.

J.H.S. halls are cleaned each day with a large vacuum cleaner.

Numerous Duties Performed By Maintenance Staff



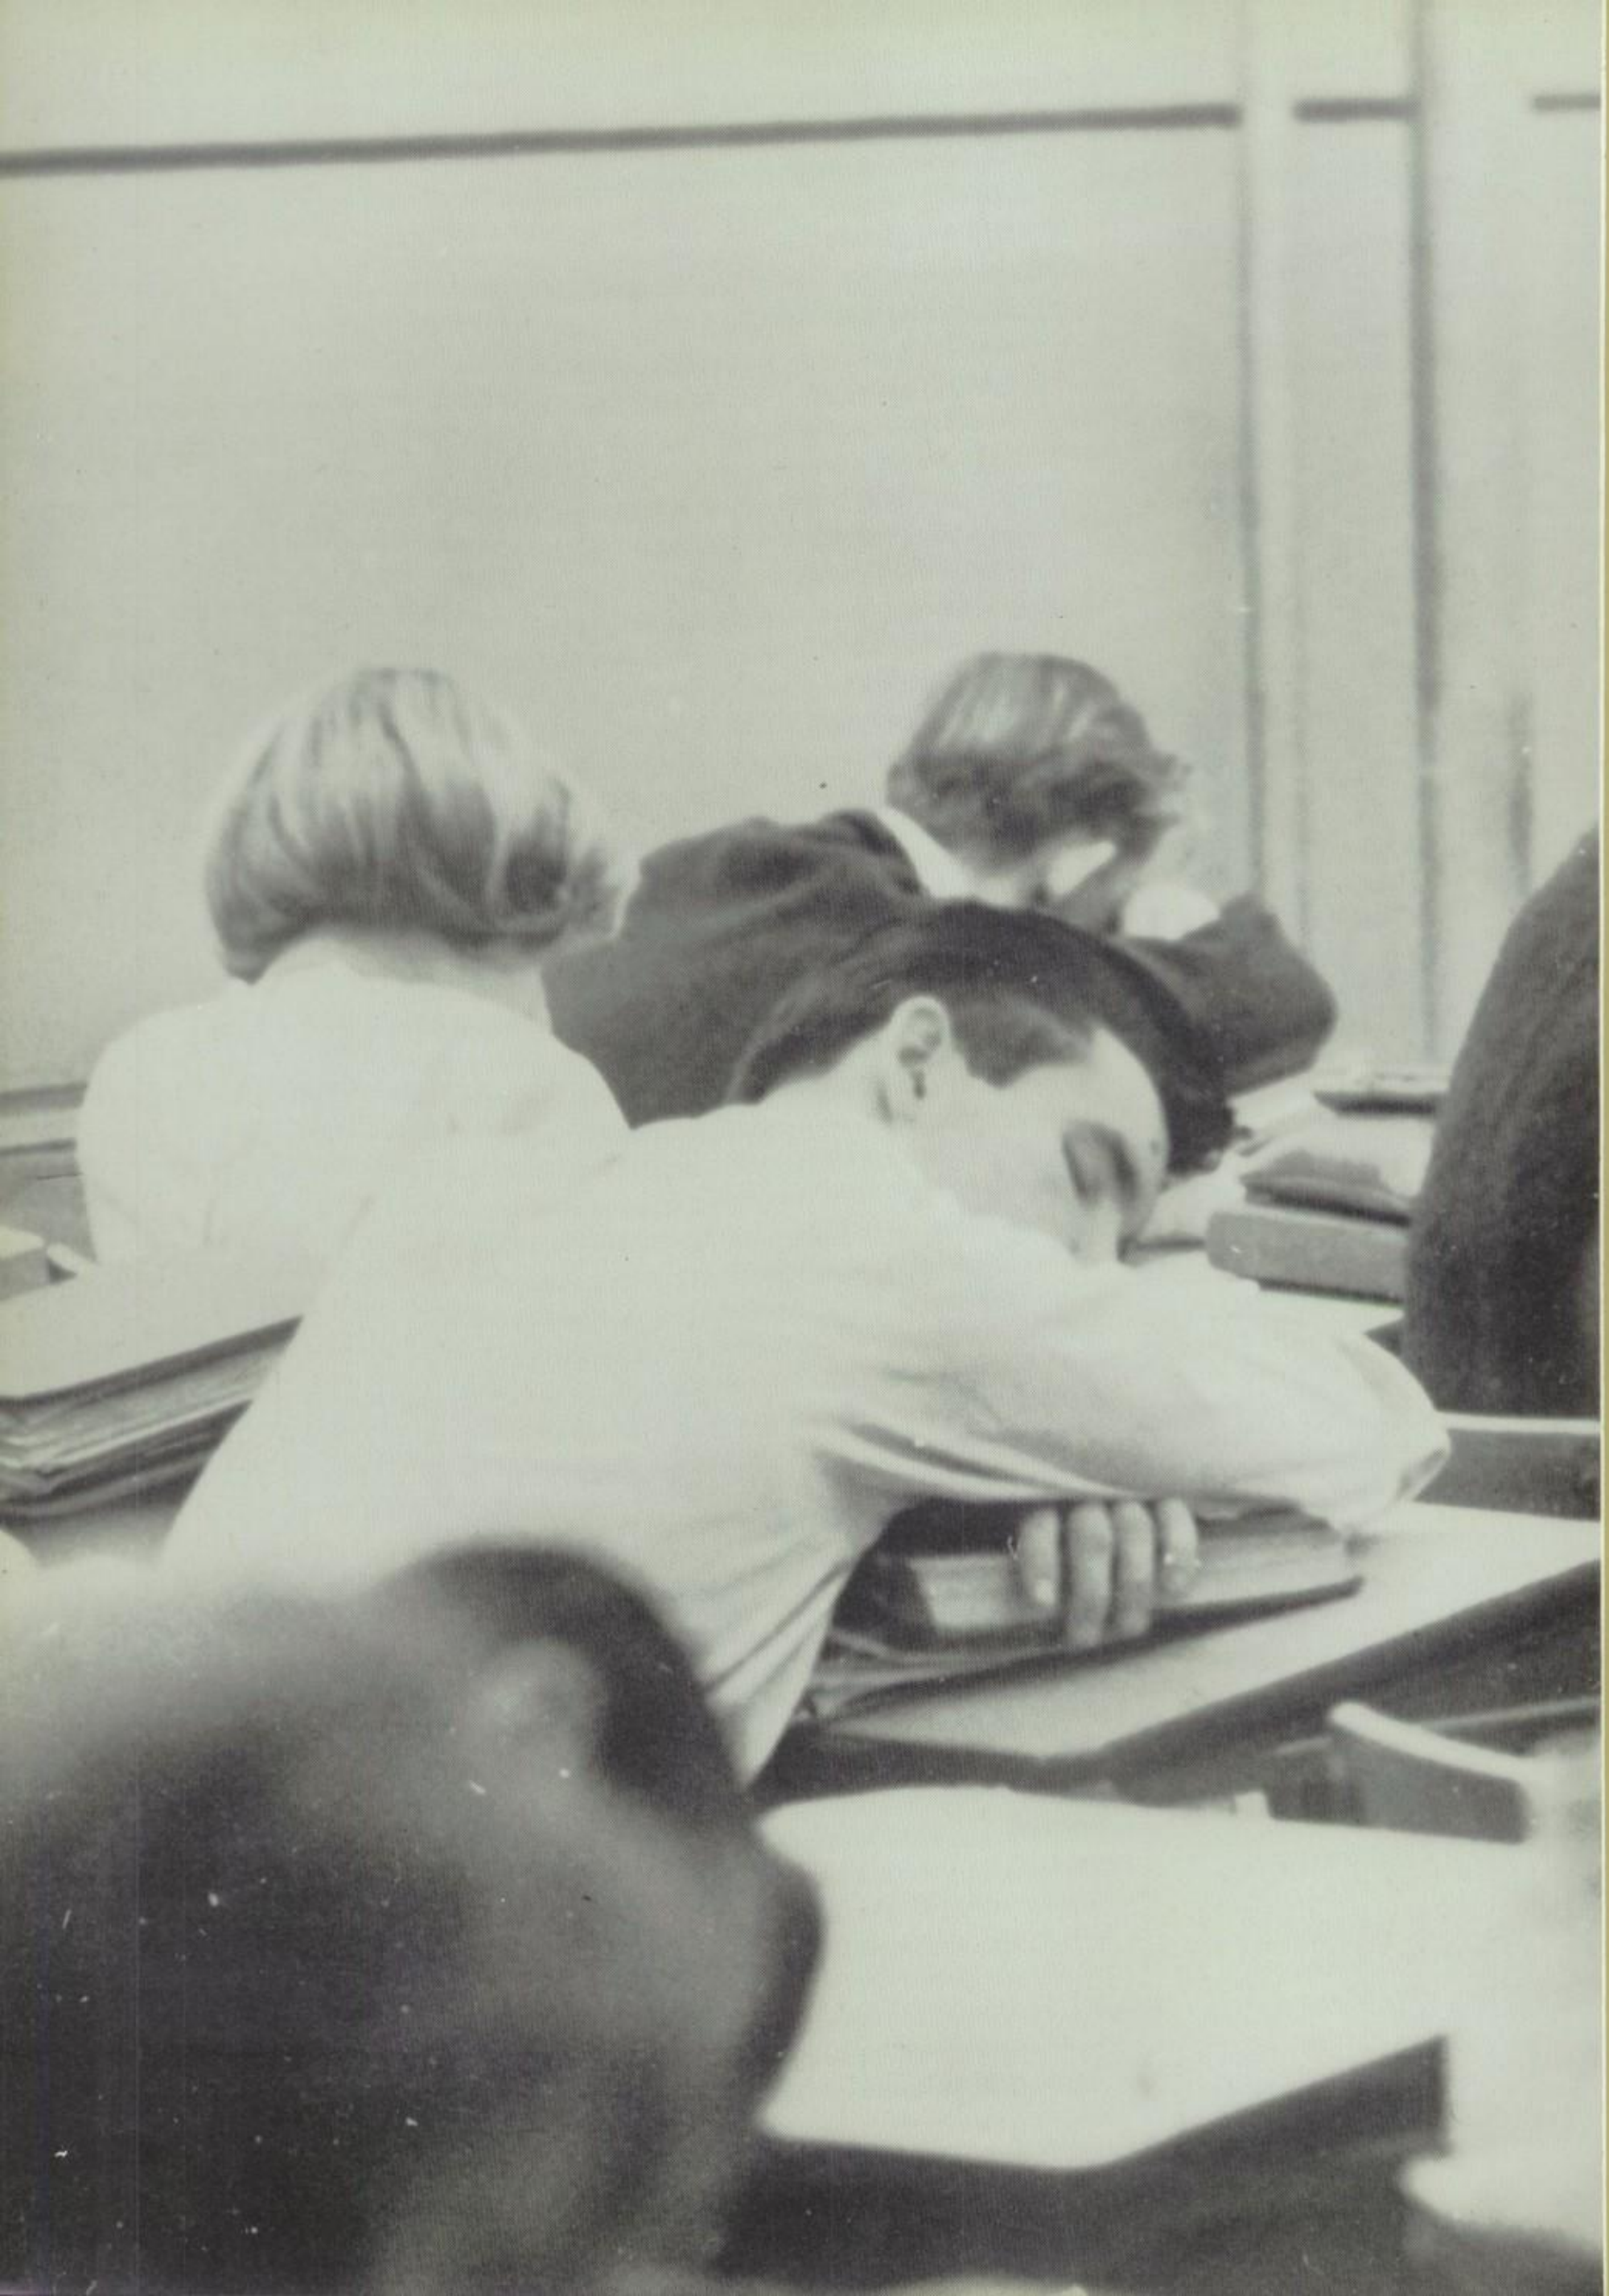
A maintenance staff member repairs the office switchboard, which was out of order for several days last fall.

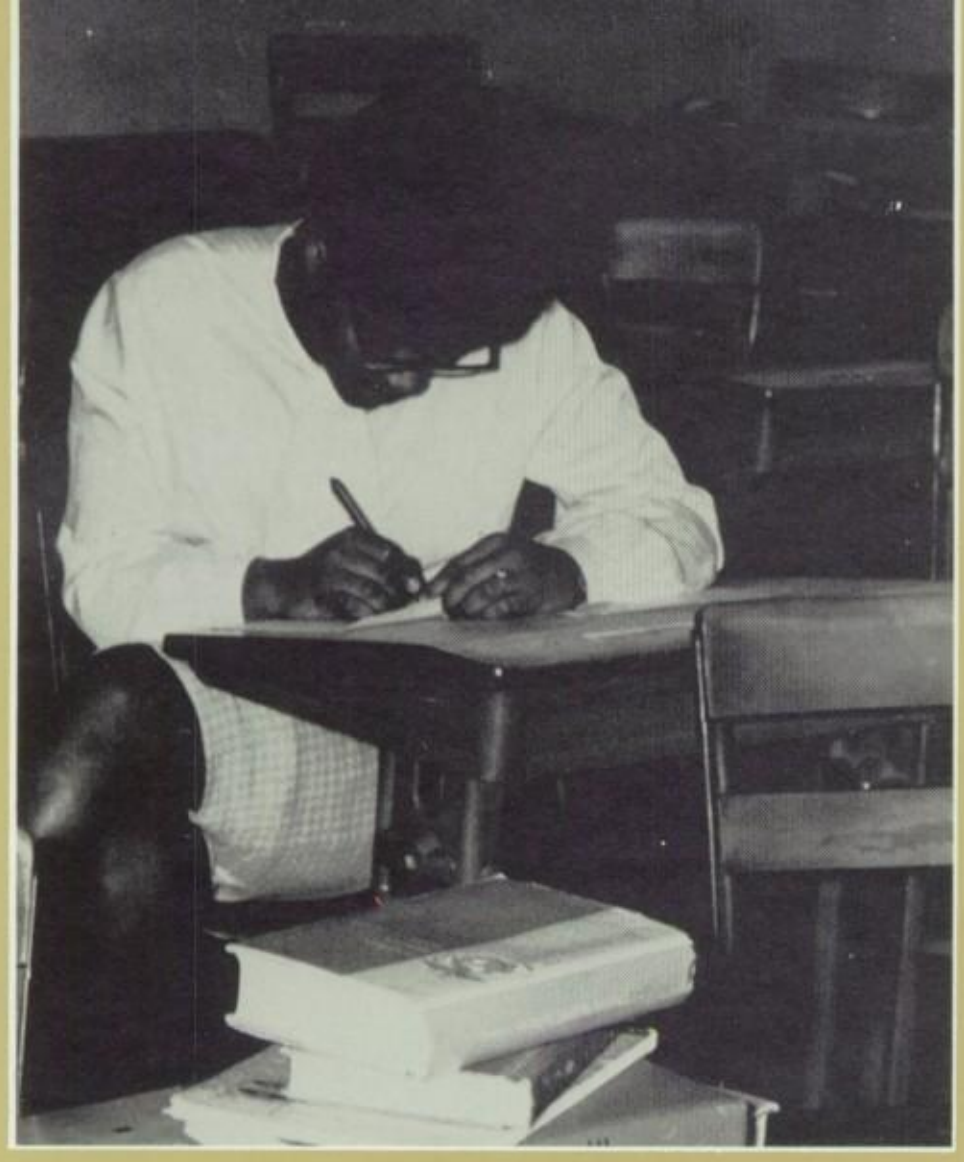
After the midday lunch period, a cafeteria worker turns to the washing of disnes.

Food Preparation A Large Undertaking

Over 900 hearty lunches are served by the J.H.S. cafeteria staff each noon. In addition, 400 rolls and at least 250 sandwiches are prepared for consumption by students and faculty. Statistics prove to be a mammoth task for fewer than a dozen ladies to feed 200 students every day. Yet with the aid of new serving lines, milk dispensers, and a spacious cooking area, they do an efficient job and well satisfy the huge appetites of today's youth.

Cafeteria cooks enjoy their lunch, although they have to wait till the regular dinner period is over.



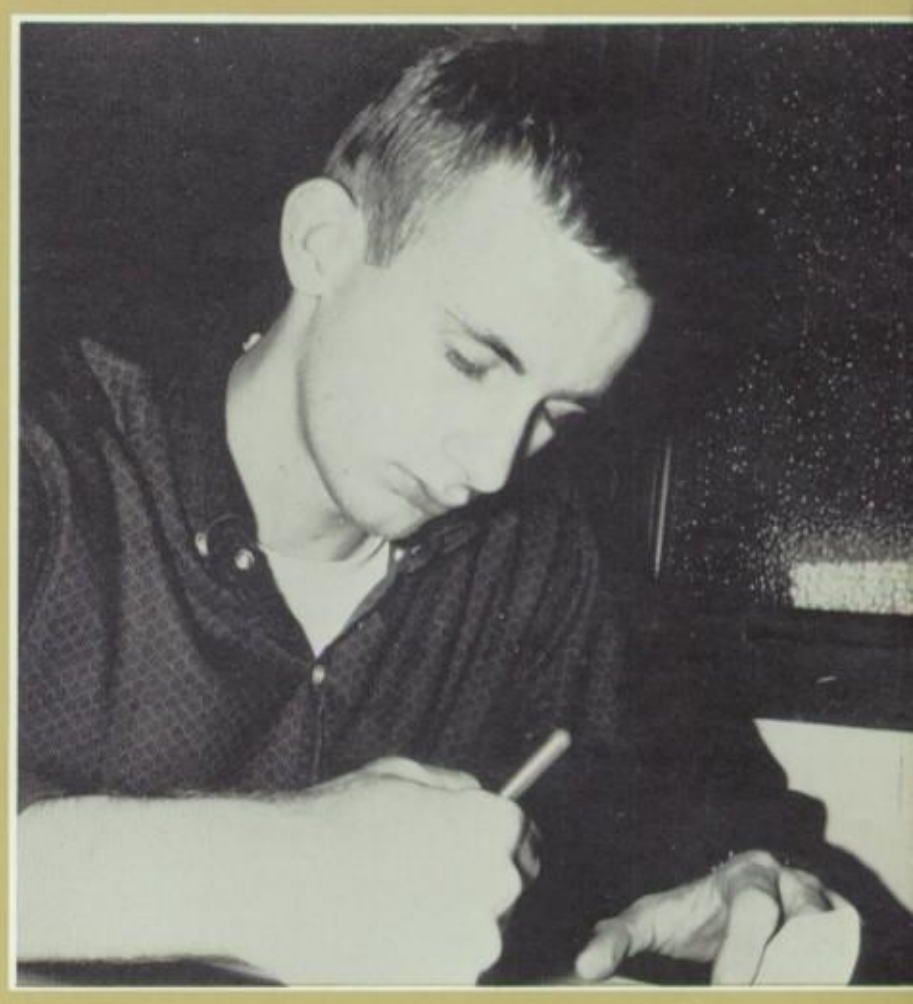


Books, a pencil, and a mind at work.

Books, books, books! The volumes which crowd our lockers and form high piles whenever we sit down are so much a part of J.H.S. life that it seems we could never forget even one of the titles. Books seem to surround us every minute.

The amount of information high school students learn is vast. From students of simple fractions, some of us change into "walking computers" who deal easily with logarithms, analytic equations, and identities. Once devotees of Buck Rogers, we soon become readers of the works of masters such as Hardy, Dickens, and Hawthorne. Our skills develop, too. At first clumsy when using a drill press, Industrial Arts majors become near-craftsmen before graduation. Burnt cookie-makers are transformed into culinary artists in Home Economics classes. All in all, we advance in knowledge much more rapidly than we would have guessed.

High school work is hard. Homework is far from light most evenings. Yet, the long hours, the grimaces when problems are difficult, and the hand turned limp from much writing serve to prepare us well for life. Our education will reap rewards.



Answers rarely come with ease.

"What is the square root of that number anyway?"

Tranquility amid tension: a study hall napper.

Four Experienced Teachers

Memories of difficult but inspiring periods of study remain vivid to the many pupils whose French and Spanish studies have included sessions with Miss Emma Barber. She is a dedicated teacher, one with full knowledge of her subject and ability to transfer it to others. Known for her insistence upon hearing only foreign languages spoken in the classroom, she can take credit for thus giving many students more security in conversation. Students who never dreamed they could speak with a French "R" have found that her guidance has led to their becoming experts at it.

Miss Barber, after retiring from her position as head of the Language Department, will continue to live in Jamestown. Plans for her future days include reading, traveling, sewing, and cooking, but "no dishwashing, please!"

EMMA M. BARBER

Harold Rubens leaves J.H.S. this year after 37 years of teaching in the system. During that time, he has worked in all levels of the public school system, teaching physical education in elementary and junior high schools, and Health here at Jamestown High School.

Mr. Rubens has not been one to limit himself to strictly classroom work. To a full daytime teaching schedule, he has added positions as Rifle Club adviser, faculty manager of the football squad, and golf team coach. These interests extend to his private life, and upon retiring, Mr. Rubens plans to devote time to golf and hunting, two favorite hobbies.

HAROLD RUBENS

Leaving J.H.S.

HAZEL F. DICKSON

Miss Hazel Dickson has known Jamestown High School well since the days when she herself attended here as a student. Her methods of teaching rank as "excellent" by any standards, and sincerity of approach is her trademark. Presently head of the English Department, she has worked hard to introduce new programs, such as accelerated classes, to the department offerings. New, more varied books for all English classes have been among her chief desires, and she has seen large numbers of new volumes find their place in the hands of students.

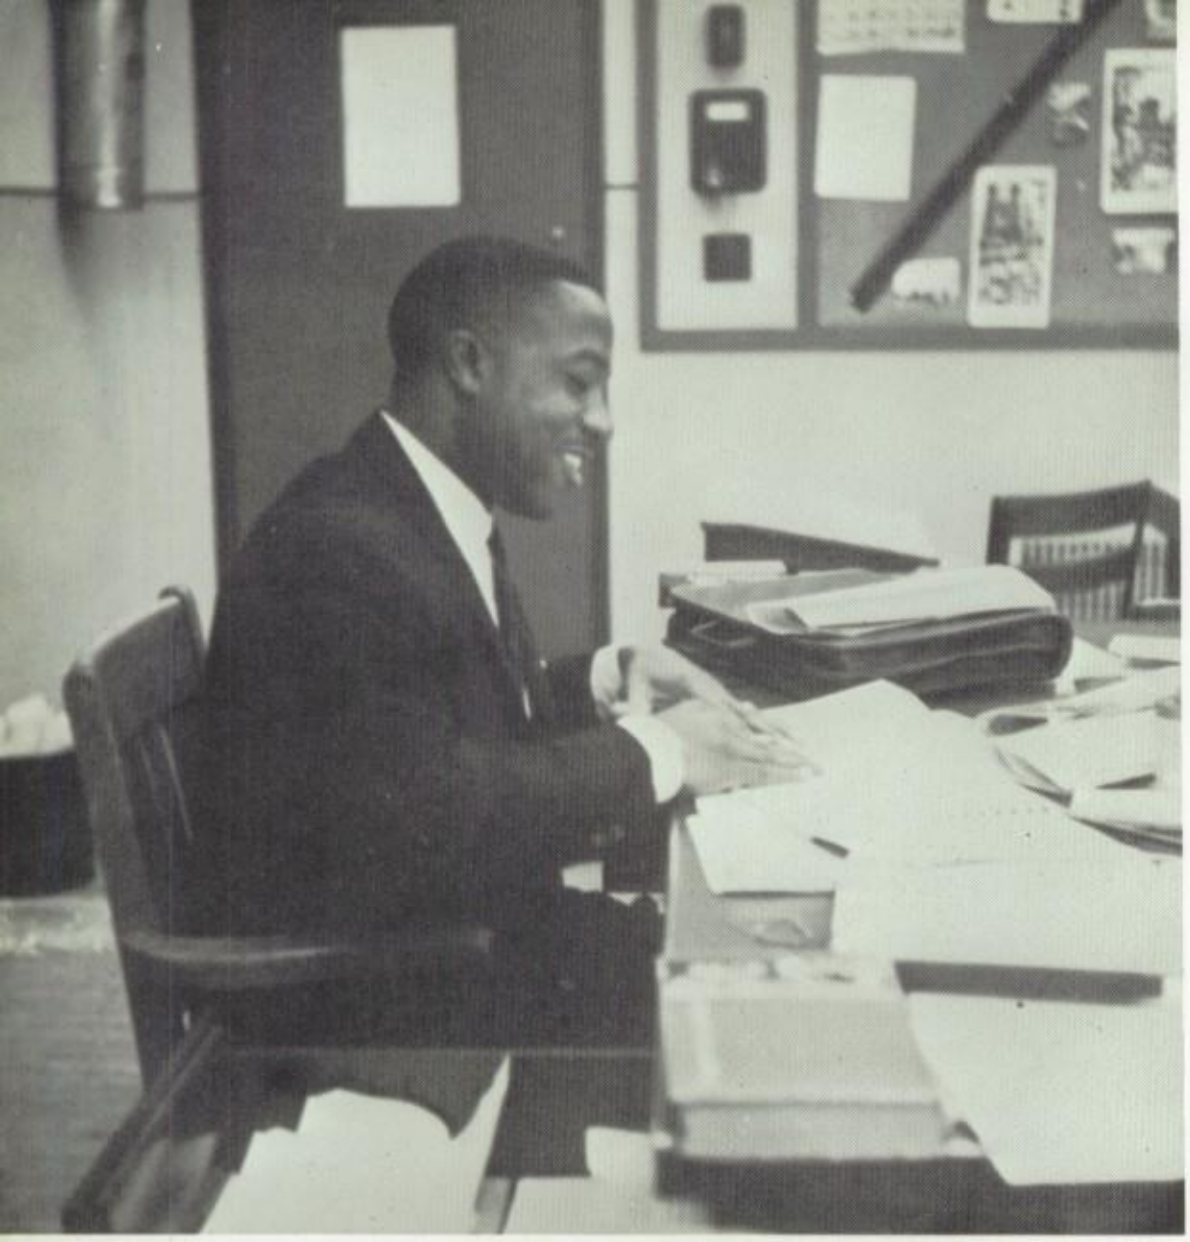
Miss Dickson will reside in Jamestown after retiring. Reading, traveling, gardening, and having fun in general will take up her time.

ROLLAND H. TAFT

Although referred to by many comic titles ("Boogie Man of J.H.S.", "Lord High Executioner", etc.), assistant principal Rolland Taft still is known most of all as "a favorite teacher among favorite teachers.' In charge of attendance and discipline, Mr. Taft comes in contact with many students and can never be called less than fair in his relationships with any of them.

Now in his 38th year at Jamestown High, Mr. Taft can look back upon a career in which he has contributed his fullest to the school. Basketball coach for a number of years, he was recently honored by the many men who'd once played on his teams. Also known as a willing participant in any fun making, Mr. Taft has been the "star" of several comedy skits and some rollicking Student-Faculty basketball games.

Always advising students to work hard, Mr. Taft will probably do just that himself after retirement. He enjoys ceramics and gardening, and will be sure to give his best efforts to these hobbies.



Mr. Jack Connor laughs at one of the anecdotes he uses so often in his Spanish and French classes.

Mr. Donald Anderson takes a look at the work of some of his art students.

Art Department Stresses Creativity

Linda Melquist puts final touches on a project for Lettering class.

Beginning work on a clay model, Ronald Lindberg does an assignment for the Crafts course.

Realizing that art is a vast field encompassing many media, the art staff at J.H.S. acquaints students with both its familiar and little-known forms. As a basis for all other study, art pupils are required to enroll in Foundation Workshop, a course designed to expose students to many facets of art. Upon completion of that course, they can go on to examine more closely the fields which have interested them most. Subjects taught in the department run the gamut from sculpture and oil painting to interior decoration and fashion design. Lettering, graphics, and other courses which teach specialized artistic skills, also provide a wide spectrum from which the student may choose his favorites.

Open to seniors only is the Senior Art Workshop, in which the student spends five days a week working on the project of his choice, with his teacher acting as adviser. In this course there is excellent opportunity for a person to develop his own artistic techniques, techniques which will identify all the art work of a lifetime as a person's own.

Business Courses Teach Career Skills

Evelyne Oudart learns business letter forms in Typing class.

Skills of business practice are learned in numerous business classes at J.H.S. Almost twenty courses are offered in our program. Students going on to college, as well as those who will start their business careers right away, find that these courses are worthwhile.

Typing ability is sought by many students. Some teenagers hope to use it in earning college expenses, while others will need it soon on the job. Four different typing courses are offered at Jamestown High. Notetaking, designed to improve speed in taking classroom notes, is another course which is especially attractive to college preparatory students.

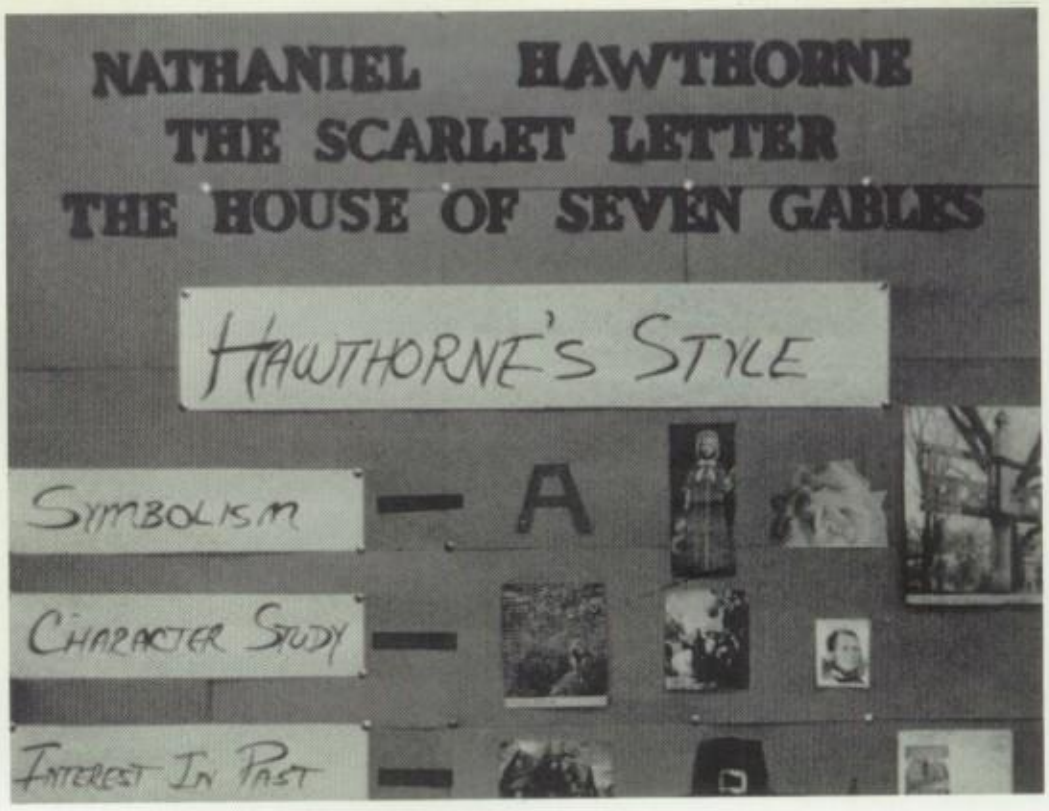
Other business talents are taught in a variety of courses. Future accountants fill up Bookkeeping and Business Arithmetic classes, and Distribution is helpful to those who wish to become buyers for retail stores. Shorthand and Secretarial Practice provide a full program for girls planning to be secretaries.

One of the most appreciated functions of the department is its assistance to students looking for work. Mrs. Mary Russell, department head, seeks out available positions and recommends students for them. In addition, many girls are urged to take Civil Service exams, and often find work if results are satisfactory.

Lynette Erickson uses an office machine in the Secretarial Practice room, as she calculates a list of figures.

Cindy Rogerson looks on as Jean Kosthorst transcribes some shorthand material.

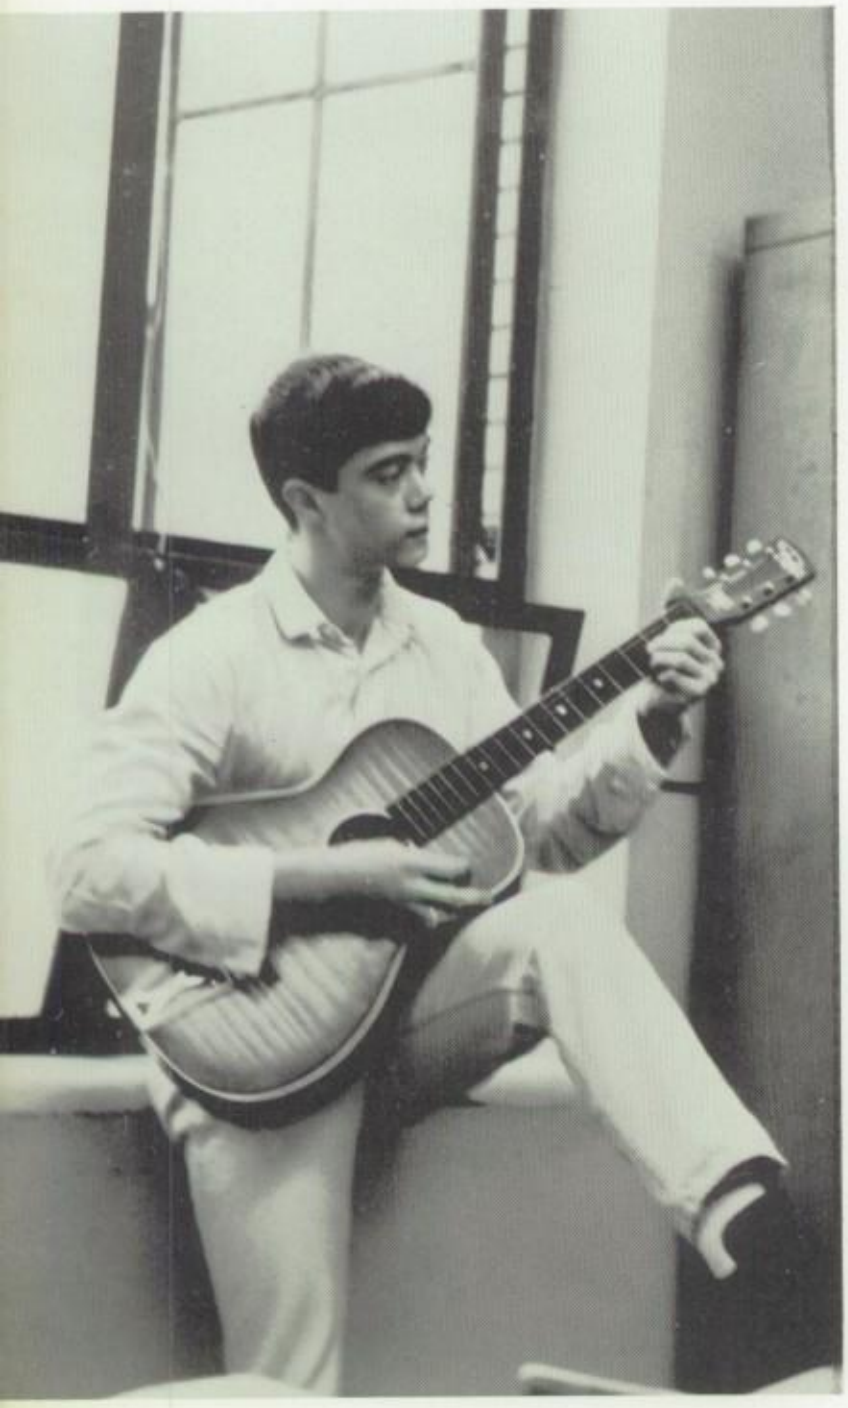
Loretta Potter begins reading Crime and Punishment, a book recently added to the curriculum in Accelerated English.



Magazine photographs illustrate a chart put up in Mrs. Susanna Kurtzhals' English classroom.

English Classes Develop Expression

An unusual event in an English class takes place when Doug Noon sings folk songs for Miss Judith Elwinger's class.



Dave Johnson works on a typical English assignment—putting sentences on the blackboard.

Students of any course, as men in any vocation, must be able to express themselves effectively. Developing good expression is the primary purpose of the English Department.

Oral expression is given freedom to develop in a number of ways: class reports, panel discussions, and on-the-spot debates which may arise at any time. In teaching good writing style, teachers depend much on literature. A wide background in books is as important to style as is consideration of vocabulary and grammar, two other facets of English study.

14,000 volumes are used by twenty English teachers to stress the many aspects of our language. Familiar to J.H.S. students are thick literature anthologies, novels from A Tale of Two Cities to Crime and Punishment, short stories, and the vocabulary builder, Word Wealth. Tape recorders, a record player, opaque projector, and a library of recordings are also employed by these instructors. With all these tools, students get a full sampling of all that makes our methods of communication possible.

Lab, Special Programs Aid Language Department

By offering a wide variety of languages, the J.H.S. Language Department enables students to become better acquainted with a large part of the world. Students delve deeply into customs and history of the country from which the language they study comes. Penpal programs in which some J.H.S. students participate also develop further understanding. Italian class students have an especially fine contact in their letter exchange with citizens of Cantu, Italy, Jamestown's sister city. Also, world-traveling teachers, who have lived in France, Italy, Germany, and Puerto Rico, can provide personal glimpses of everyday life in foreign lands.

J.H.S. today offers four-year sequences in three languages and three years in another. Students who follow the complete sequences are numerous. These persons have a chance to become well-acquainted with foreign literature and history, along with basics of language. In lab sessions, pronunciation is developed. Therefore, the student at the end of his study has hac a chance to become fairly fluent.

Using a copy of Paris Match, a French magazine, Linda Gustavson prepares a report for her French IV class.

In the language lab, students concentrate as they try to understand recordings made by European speakers.

Miss Rosella Agostine, teacher of the new Italian course at J.H.S., helps Mary Margaret Costanzo with her grammar assignment.

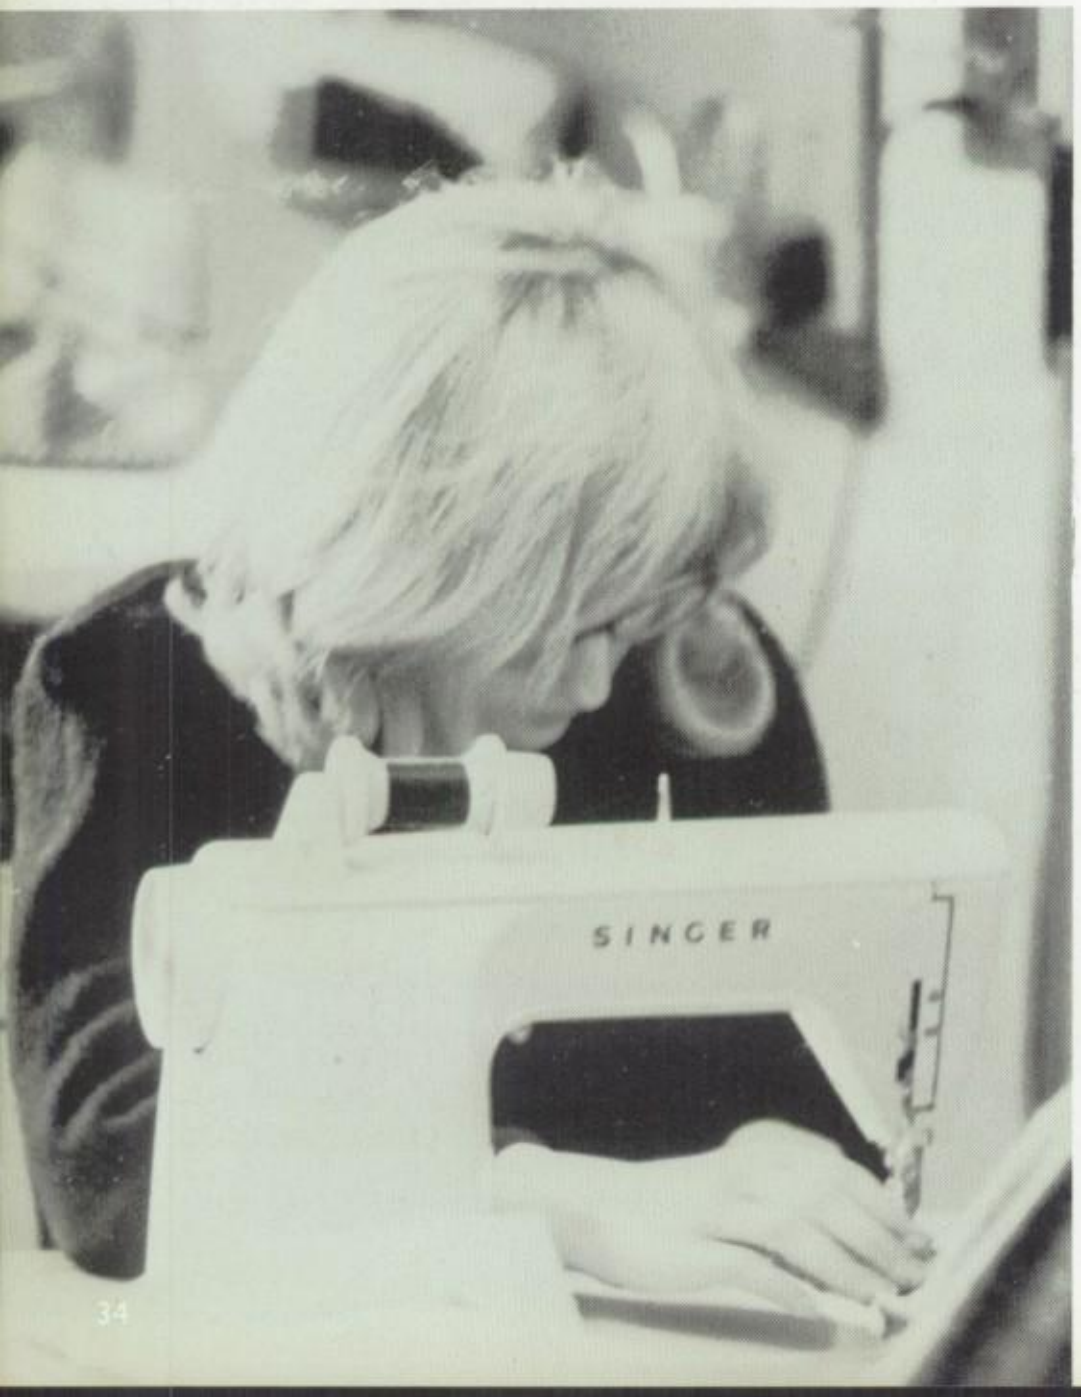
In the center of the Home Economics kitchen, students work on a test.

Entertaining toddlers, making cookies, and preparing special luncheons are just a few activities in which Home Economics students participated this year. Child Care students were visited by several babies one day, and they spent an enjoyable period entertaining the tots. In sewing classes, girls fashioned garments for class projects, and thus added items to their own wardrobes. Both simple and elegant recipes were tried out during the year in the department kitchens. At special luncheons, guests sampled and enjoyed this food. Cookies made by students decorated a third-floor display case during the Christmas season, tempting the dieter to break through the glass and snatch a tidbit.

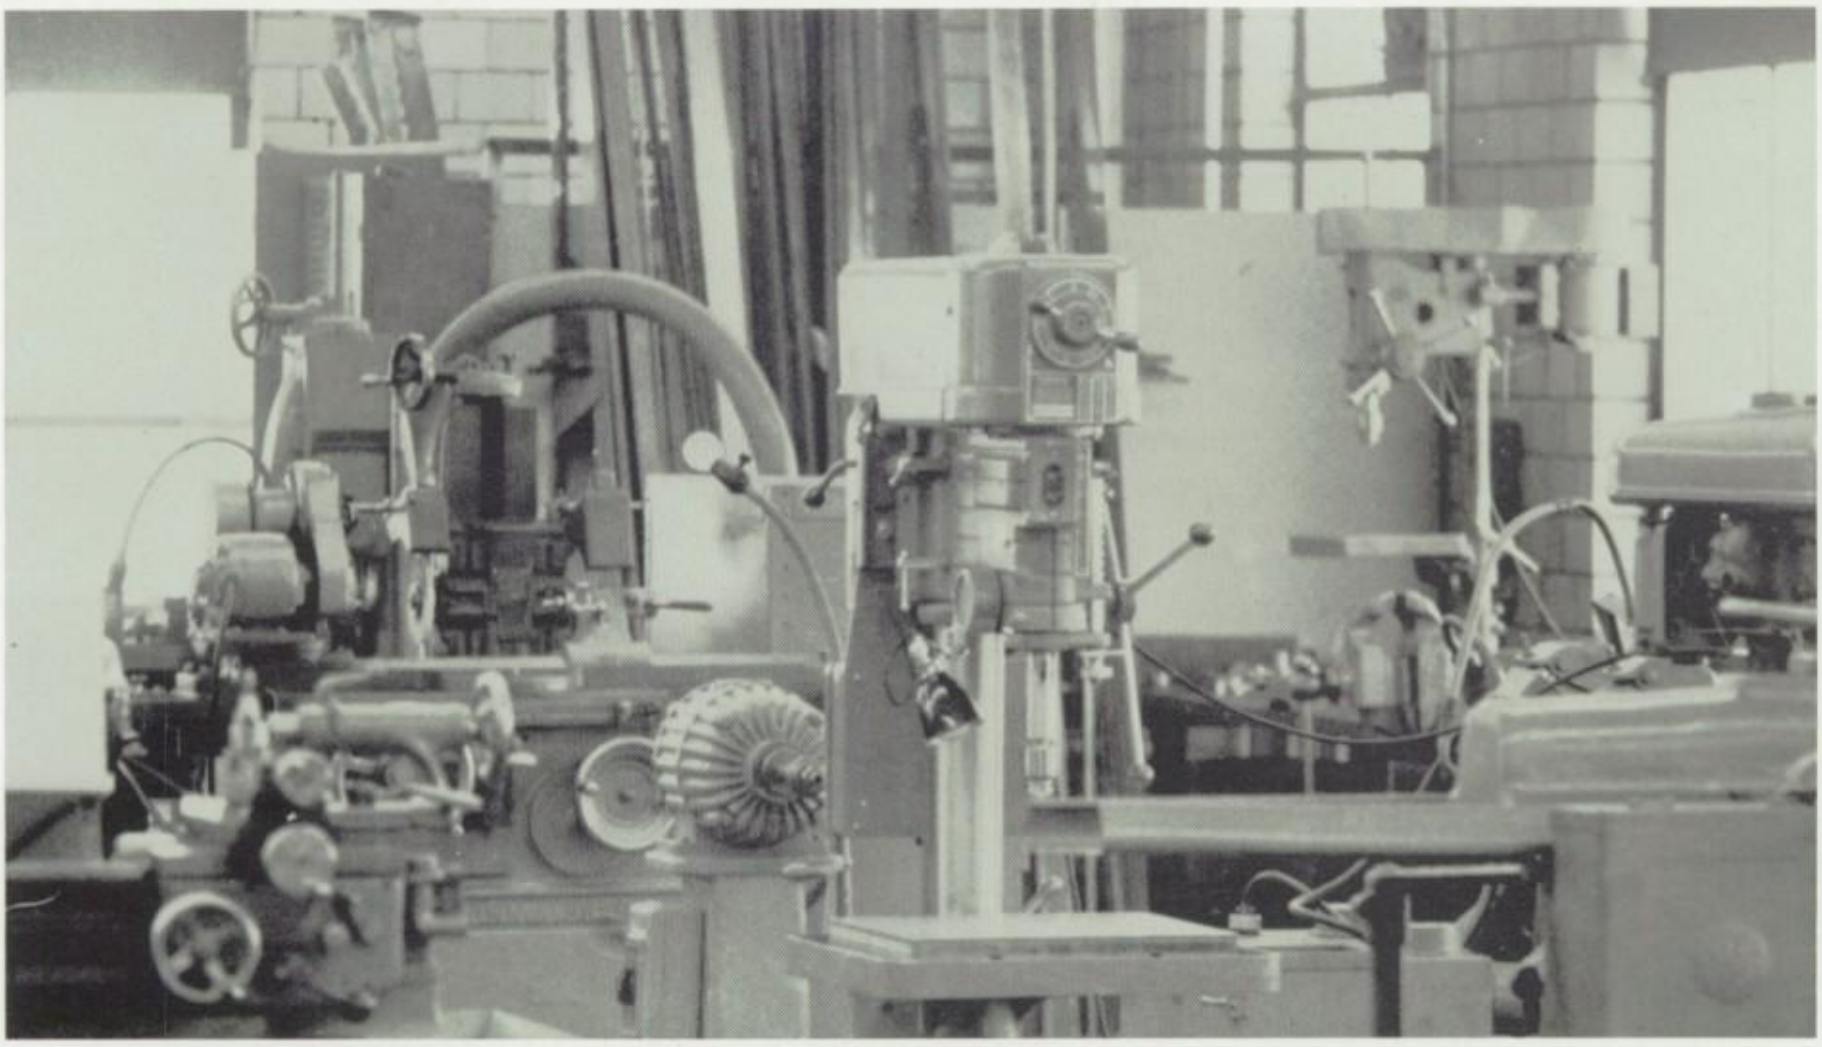
Sometimes, in home economics classes, a dish or two may be broken, or a cake burned. However, the future homemaker learns valuable lessons through experience while enrolled in a home economics course at Jamestown High.

Experience Is Teacher in Home Economics Department

With the completion of an outfit being sewn in Home Economics class, a girl adds an item to her own wardrobe.



Mixing ingredients for a recipe in Home Economics, concentration is needed by a student.



Machines of all sizes and shapes fill each room in the Industrial Arts Department.

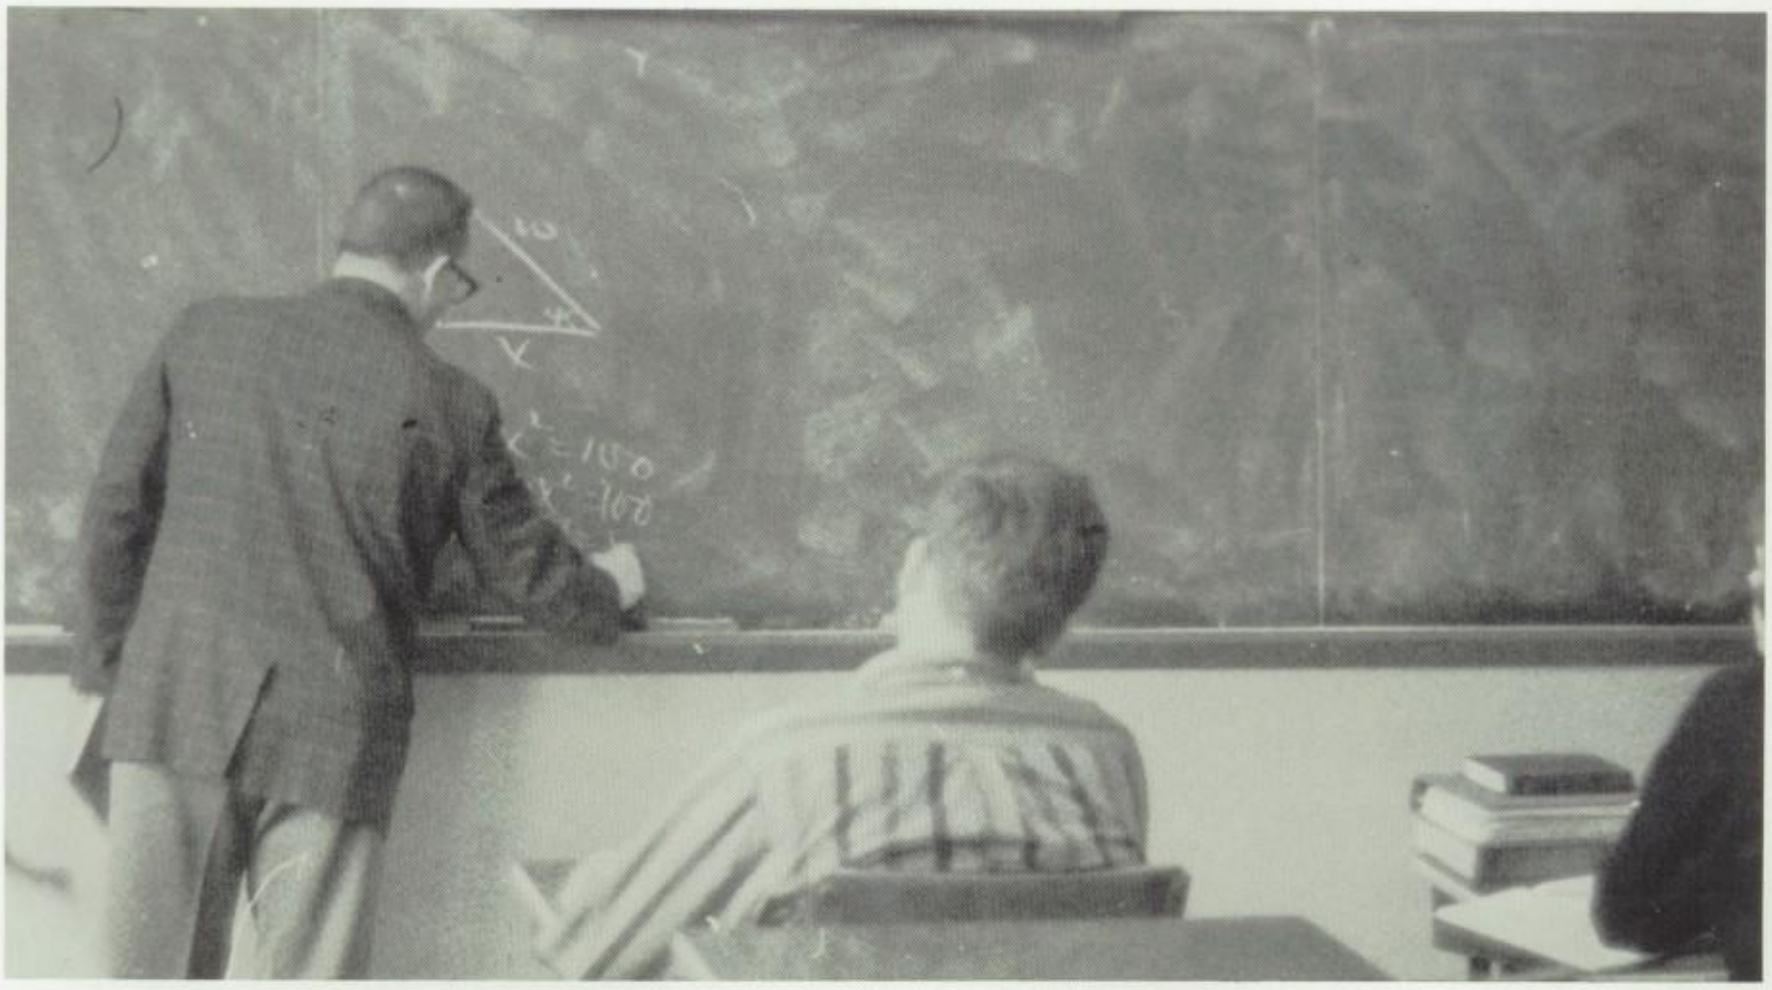
Machines, Surveys Modernize Industrial Arts Work

Jamestown High School possesses an extensive Industrial Arts Department, one of the largest in the area. Twenty-one courses are offered as training for students who are interested in industrial work, engineering, and electronics. Shop courses, teaching use of many machines, a number of drafting courses, and other special offerings for technical course students, are part of the department picture.

New equipment is an exceptional aid in educating people who soon will be involved in a highly technological world. New facilities which have appeared in the Industrial Arts Building of late are new lathes for Machine and Wood Shops and a new drill press in Machine Shop. Two new Ford motors contributed recently have added a great deal to the modern curriculum of the Auto Machine Shop.

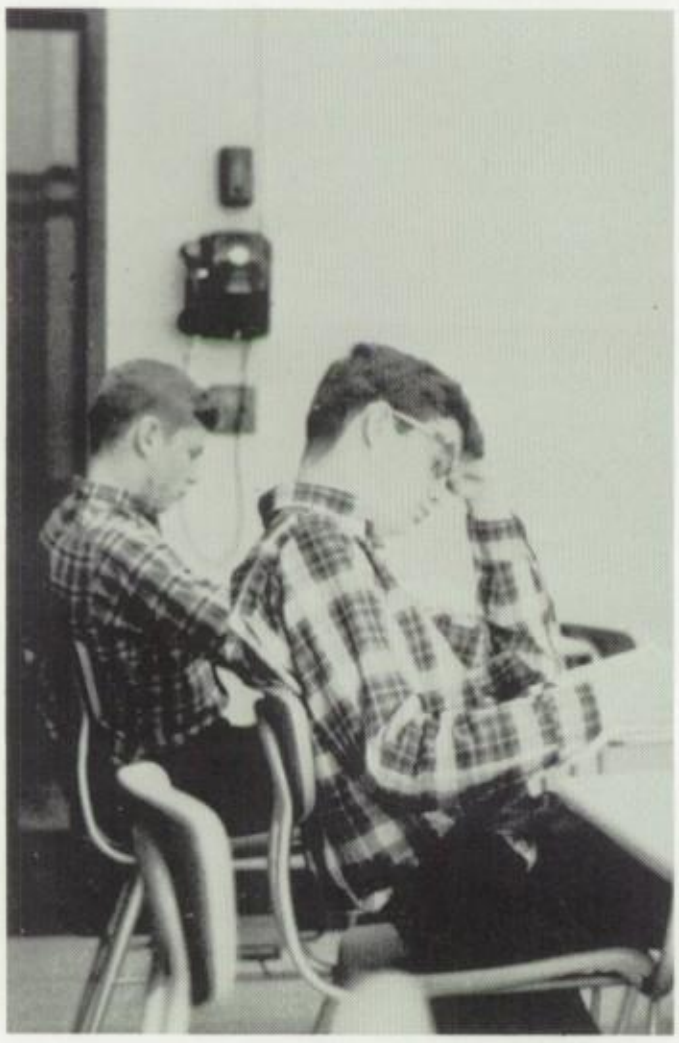
Still looking toward the future, Industrial Arts instructors this year are participating in a tri-county survey. Expansion of the present program may be a result of the information gathered in this study.

Work on projects for Industrial Arts students takes long hours of painstaking work.



Mr. Lloyd Lyke explains geometric principles to one of his classes.

Math Enrollment Rises As Courses Expand



Craig Johnson and George Hutchens give all their attention to their homework as they work on difficult equations.

Emphasis upon mathematics in high school has increased greatly in the past few years. This emphasis annually causes the number of high school students who study advanced math courses to rise. For example, since last year, the enrollment in the Math II course has more than doubled.

Accelerated math sequences in junior high school have allowed a large percentage of J.H.S. math students to take courses never before offered. Analytical Geometry is a recent addition to the curriculum, and Principles in Mathematics, with emphasis on logic and probability, is an exceptionally worthwhile part of the Math 13 course. Also valuable to the J.H.S. math program are overhead projectors, which can display easily detailed concepts which otherwise might take many minutes to explain.

Closely following the drum score, Dave Papageorge makes music at a band rehearsal.

During A'Cappella sectionals, girls look over music while a recording of a performance is played back.

Music Department Has Large-Scale Program

Mr. Donald Bube sings along while leading one of his vocal groups.

Students who play or sing in J.H.S. musical organizations are busy all the time. The bands, orchestra, and vocal organizations all have crowded schedules. Rehearsals, first of all, take up much time. One period of group rehearsal is part of the daily schedule, and smaller sections meet weekly to work on individual parts. In addition, extra practices in the morning and afternoon are called frequently. Although they mean hard work, these rehearsals result in the polished performances which are a trademark of J.H.S. musical groups.

Entertainment for gatherings all over Jamestown is provided by musical ensembles from school, and the appreciation of local citizens is expressed in many ways. Concerts by outside musical groups always are assured a full house. Projects which pay for the groups' concert tours are only possible through contributions from an enthusiastic community. Also, the Music Parents' Association, made up of young musicians' mothers and fathers, helps the groups a great deal. Expensive uniforms, a band shell, risers, and recording equipment have been bought with funds earned by the association. Their chief project is the concession stand at football games.

The talents of many teenagers are boosted as they study music from our department staff. Good ensemble singing and playing is naturally stressed so that group performances are of high quality. However, individual students also have an opportunity to develop their abilities as soloists, and at Jamestown High they take advantage of this chance. At the solo festival held here each spring, at least one-half of the young musicians in school perform numbers.

Science Laboratory Work Emphasized

Final touches are put on a sketch in his Biology lab book by Larry Anderson.

Mr. Allen Ayers answers questions of students working after school in his Physics classroom.

Students who take advantage of our Science Department program are not likely to be looking for "snap" courses. The material taught in science classes covers some complex ideas, and requires much work and investigation to understand.

Man's environment and his adjustment to it is revealed in detail to the student who studies the full sequence of J.H.S. science courses. Living organisms are studied first-hand in Biology, while the forces affecting our lives and the elements surrounding us are covered in detailed Physics and Chemistry classes. The Earth Science course examines geology and astronomy, while courses in Physical Science and Health supplement the teachings of physics and biology instructors.

Today, laboratory work is greatly emphasized in an effort to further understanding through chances for close observation. New equipment, including a wave behavior machine, incubator, and human skeleton, has made this teaching more effective. With new textbooks aiding in explanations, students learn much as they dissect frogs, repeat Lavoisier's famous oxygen experiment, and calculate work problems during laboratory periods.

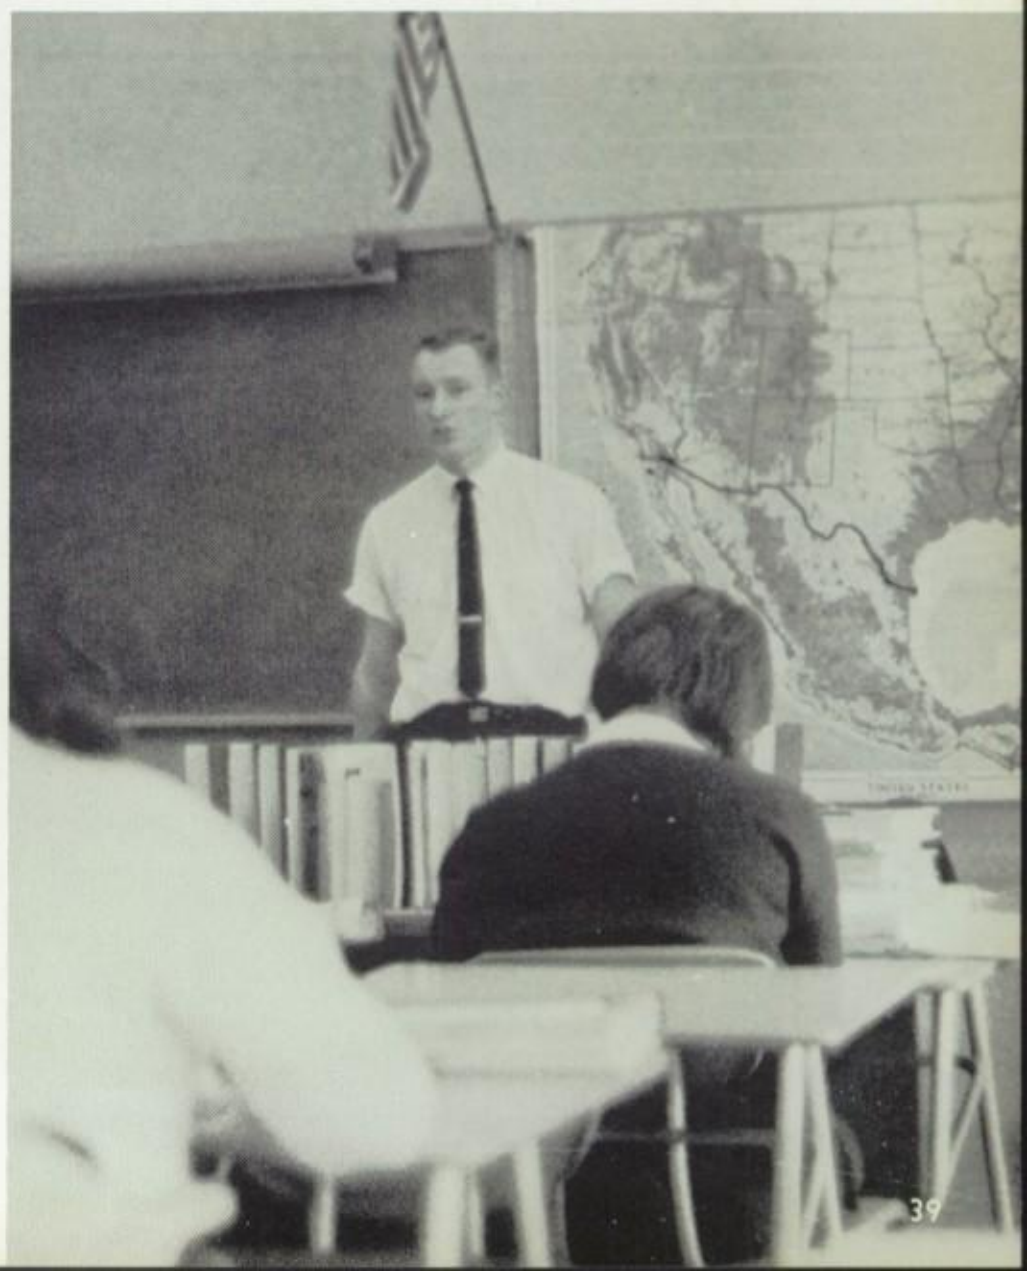
Mr. Thayer Pratt prepares a lecture for the team teaching classes in American History.

Changes Many In Social Studies Department

Experimentation has been part of all recent activities in our Social Studies Department. Instructors presently are introducing new types of classes while familiar courses are modernized via new textbooks and more visual aids.

Chief of all innovations is the team teaching program which began this year for some American History II students. Three classes of seniors assemble each Monday morning to hear lectures on American economic, political, and social history. Teachers from several departments have served as speakers at these sessions. In small seminar groups, students discuss the lecture topics, as well as chapters in the book The American Past. Three regular classroom periods are also part of the students' schedule.

A new college-level text, which presents cultural problems in detail, is now being used in the Sociology class. Also part of this course are field trips to such places as the Chautauqua County Courthouse. Other new classes also have been introduced recently, among them a course in Ancient History, which together with Economics was offered in Summer School sessions. In all history classes, new methods are adding color to the course of study. For instance, films, records, and tapes have proven to be valuable classroom tools, and the department's supply of these materials is growing rapidly.



Emphasizing the territorial expansion of the United States, Mr. David Fairbanks speaks to one of his American History classes.

Library Source Of Varied Materials

Girls look at displays on the library counter as they wait to check out books.

Joann Castiglione and Paula Sauner repair books while working as library assistants after school.

J.H.S. students with study needs as well as interest in books for pleasure make each day a busy one in the library. All types of books are available there. The fiction collection is extensive and varied, with paperback editions of various authors' works adding to the supply. Many reference books, a pamphlet file, and stacks of magazines dating back many years, provide help for term paper writers, be they students from English, history, or science classes. Many recordings are also available.

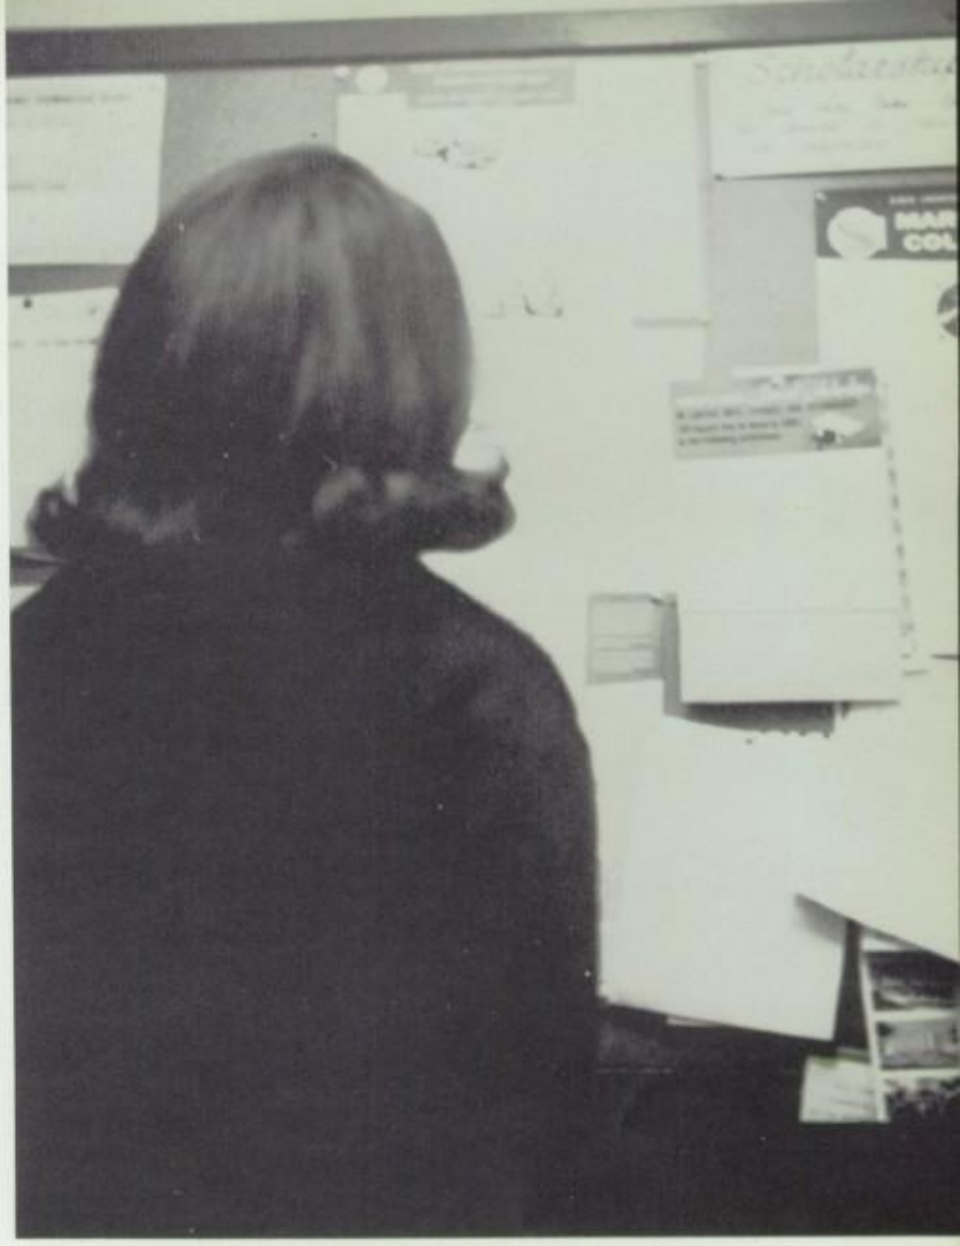
New books continue to pour in to the library, bringing students up to date on many developments of the day. Among volumes added this year are a dictionary of American biographies and the Encyclopedia International.

Driver Education

J.H.S. students are fortunate in having an excellent Driver Education course offered to them. Through a full-scale program of training, which uses unique devices, students are made well aware of the value of safe driving habits.

Two periods a week, students are in the classroom, where films, lectures, and demonstrations illustrate good driving skills. One day weekly, classes practice with the Drivo-trainers, devices which enable students to get used to the automobile controls without moving. On-the-road practice is also part of the weekly course plan.

Driver education students find that the course is well worth taking. Upon completion of studies, teens may receive a "blue card" from the state. This piece of paper has big benefits. It enables students to receive a 10% to 15% reduction on insurance, and allows them to obtain a senior operator's license at the age of 17.



College advertisements and scholarship information in the Guidance Office catch the eye of a student.

Counselors Kept Busy Helping Students

Many roles are assumed by guidance counselors as they assist students in mapping out future plans. They begin as keepers of records, with files full of information concerning each pupil's school career. As classroom teachers, they instruct all sophomores in Occupational Lab. Here, aptitude tests are taken and early thought is given to the vocation a student someday will follow. At other times they are examiners, administering various scholarship and college entrance tests.

For seniors, the counselor is a much-sought adviser in preparation for college. Guidance offices contain catalogues and advertisements which give students a chance to examine the merits of many schools. When many college application forms are being filled out, the person in the guidance office is the first to offer aid to confused applicants. He also gets that important college transcript into the mail. For seniors, as well as underclassmen, a counselor is a much appreciated member of the faculty.

Grueling Tests Follow Gym Class Training

Fitting 2000 J.H.S. students into physical education classes is a big undertaking. To avoid overcrowding, sophomores and juniors this year have two classes of gym instruction per week, while seniors are now scheduled for only one period. However, short gym hours do not limit the amount of physical training offered. Both boys' and girls' gym classes are as crowded with activities as they are with students.

The rudiments of many sports are taught during the year in the boys' classes. Mainly team sports, they include touch football, basketball, volleyball, and softball. Some training in tumbling and track skills is given in the spring. Team sports also are mixed with individual training in girls' classes. They play games of soccer, cageball, basketball, and softball in the course of the year. Tumbling, archery, golf, and tennis lessons are also part of the program.

Physical fitness tests administered by the state are given to all J.H.S. students. Graded according to ability for each age, the tests measure proficiency to do squat thrusts, sit-ups, an agility test and a 120-yard run. J.H.S. students registered somewhat above the state average in all events.

Rigorous gym classes often leave teenagers with aching joints and sore muscles. Yet, the fun of good competition brings enjoyment that rises above the groans uttered when we hear, "Okay, hit the mats and let's see some pushups!"

Special Education students prepare individual assignments in class.

Work-Study System Part Of Special Classes

Students in Jamestown High School's special education classes receive training which prepares them to secure full-time employment after graduation. To provide this training, a two-phase work-study program has been set up by department instructors. For eight months, class members work in the community without pay. Further on-the-job experience is obtained as they work for two hours at a paying job over a nine-month period. This unique program is the only one in western New York.

With income earned at their paying jobs, students have opportunities to begin saving money. Therefore, banking, budget balancing, and handling of tax returns are taught during their classroom periods.

ASSOCIATIONS

Student Council meeting: The heads of council members frame that of presiding officer Dan Lund.

Associations bind people together, taking each person away from self-centeredness and making him part of an interacting group. It is this interplay of thoughts and action that makes much of life worth living, worth having experienced.

At Jamestown High School, almost every student can find an outlet for his talents in some organization out of the many that exist. Offering his gifts to the work of some group, he can play a part in the important area of service. Thus, in J.H.S. associations, with their varying sizes and purposes, students grow more ready to assume the task of leadership in our world.

Parents and new inductees file past the serving line as Janis Carnahan pours punch at an Honor Society reception.

Honor Society members were at work a week after school opened, raising funds for their treasury. They sold school book covers to students as their first project of the year. This work, joined with their sales of cold drinks and popcorn at basketball games and later on of plastic covers for yearbooks, helped boost the treasury a great deal. In this way, more funds became available for a scholarship, which is presented annually to a member of the group.

In October, the society welcomed members of fellow chapters from throughout the district at the first annual symposium of these groups. Topics discussed included modern American problems as well as the purposes and qualifications of Honor Society. Students from morning seminars reported to the general meeting in the afternoon.

Fifty-five new Honor Society members were welcomed in February. This induction made them part of an organization in which high standards prevail. Four qualities—character, scholarship, leadership, and service—characterize a group that is of great value to the total school program.

tudent Council display case.

Nearly every area of school life is included in the scope of Student Council work at J.H.S. Attempting to make the school a center for all students' activity, this student-governing body took on many new projects this year. Number one on the list of Council goals is the building of school spirit. Council members took the lead in raising money for student buses to the Aquinas and Warren football games and the season final basketball game at Fredonia. Huge banners placed in the halls during the football season were not just accidents, but were brought about by council planning, with help from many students. Also in the areas of school spirit, council leaders awarded Player of the Week trophies to standout players on the gridiron.

Making students feel part of the school and keeping them informed of what is happening has become another aim of this group. A handbook for incoming sophomores has been drawn up recently by council members. In addition, they keep up three display cases at all times. These cases highlight the Student of the Month, Activities for the Month, and the winners of Player of the Week honors.

Fund-raising was not neglected by the Council either this year. Members took posts of leadership in the Teenage March of Dimes Drive, which was termed "very successful" at its finish. Also, along with the three classes, Student Council sponsored the school magazine sale held in February, which netted $5,000 for the school.

Debate Club meetings: Members listen as tournament plans for the next week are outlined.

Debaters Compete In

Tournament achievements were again this year a part of the picture for the Debate Club. J.H.S. teams with various amounts of experience did noteworthy jobs as they argued the question: "Resolved: that nuclear weapons should be controlled by an international organization." The varsity team took second place in the invitational meet at Canisius College, and captured first place among negative teams at the Gannon College tournament. On their longest journey, a trip to the college of the Holy Cross in Worchester, Massachusetts, varsity orators placed fourth out of 123 schools entered in one of the largest tournaments in the East. Junior Varsity competitors also returned to J.H.S. with a first place trophy. Theirs was won in the Southern Tier League Tournament at Southwestern Central School.

Even discounting forensic activity, Debate Club members had an extremely busy year. Their annual Christmas Tree Sale brought in money to pay some of the teams' heavy traveling expenses. Besides that event, they presented the play The Man Who Came to Dinner in January. In March, they shared with other schools in the sponsorship of the Tri-State Tournament in Pittsburgh. Members addressed invitations to many schools who attended, and also helped keep the tournament running smoothly.

With the re-entrance of Jamestown High School into the Southern Tier Debate League, sophomores interested in public speaking had a good chance to get a start in high school forensics. At least once weekly, sophomores were among the contingent of J.H.S. speakers who faced other nearby schools in Southern Tier contests. The topic debated was one pertinent to world affairs today: "Resolved: that nuclear weapons should be controlled by an international organization."

Sophomores also traveled to several large-scale tournaments this year. Among these contests were the annual tournament at Parma, Ohio, and several debates at New York State colleges.

N.F.L. Honored By National Leaders

National Forensic League honors debaters who have earned a specified number of points in debate competition. After being received into the organization, members can receive advanced degrees for achievements they've made in further forensic work. This year four members of the J.H.S. chapter won Degrees of Distinction, awards that are the highest offered by N.F.L. These boys are Dave Rosedahl, Rick Kessler, Bill Tracy, and Jon Rubens.

The J.H.S. group of N.F.L. honorees was honored this year as the most outstanding chapter in New York State. Bruno E. Jacobs, national secretary of the society, presented a plaque to the students at an assembly in October.

Journalists Attend Three Training Conferences

Lila Sanders types an article to be sent to the newspaper for use in the J.H.S. News.

Each Saturday evening in homes of many local high school students, there is a rush to the door when the Jamestown Post-Journal is delivered. Students try to get first chance to read the J.H.S. News, published every week in the newspaper's magazine section. This page, which details the events of the preceding week, is produced by a class of about twenty journalists at J.H.S. They spend each week covering "beats" here in school, writing up their articles, making layouts for the page, and taking photographs that add life to the coverage.

Valuable information which the students use often in their work has been gained from attendance at various conventions. This year the journalists went to three conferences. In September, they attended the Syracuse Press Convention, in March the Columbia University press meeting, and in May a meeting at St. Bonaventure University.

Yearbook Staff Introduces New Features

Red and Green staff members started their work on the first day of school, continuing through six months that were filled with work. Early decisions concerning the contents of the book were followed up with preparation of copy, layouts, and photos that continued until mid-March. Efforts to prepare all materials by the final deadline caused tired yearbook staffers to remain at work long after most other students had gone home for the day.

Several new features are part of the 1965 Red and Green, a student index and Activities and Honors sections among them. The number of pages in this volume are the greatest in any J.H.S. annual. A large book size, 9x12 "collegiate" style, is being introduced. More color photos than ever before are used. The staff, headed by editor Jeff Loomis and 14 associate editors, has worked with the hope that these innovations will make this yearbook a distinctive publication, and that new methods will serve to tell clearly the story of this year at Jamestown High School. In the book's coverage, an attempt has been made to picture school life from the viewpoint of all students, in all classes.

J.H.S. Writers Give Impetus To New Magazine

Several young writers, with different temperaments and styles but all wishing to find an outlet for their works, launched Ramblin', a literary magazine, at J.H.S. this year. The new publication contains poems, essays, and short stories, with illustrating sketches provided by high school artists.

Contributors to the magazine submitted their manuscripts to a six-member editorial board. If three of the five approved it, the writing was then passed on to Robert Doverspike, faculty adviser, who gave his opinion and suggested possible improvements. After revision of all copy, the editorial staff went to work, arranging the magazine contents so that an attractive issue would result. With final distribution of the premiere edition of Ramblin', readers got a good look at the ideas of J.H.S., displayed in an interesting publication.

Leading artists, writers, photographers, and financial managers of J.H.S. publications are honored with membership in Quill and Scroll, national honor society for high school journalists. Only those members of the staffs whose contributions can be termed outstanding are inducted into the group. This year a larger number than usual qualified for membership, and ten students received their Quill and Scroll pins at the annual spring banquet.

Future Nurses Do Volunteer Hospital Work

Girls thinking seriously about nursing as a career find F.N.A. the organization for them at J.H.S. In joining Future Nurses, they have a chance to sample hospital life and see if they enjoy work there. From 4:30 to 6:00 P.M. several days per week, members do volunteer work at W.C.A. Hospital. Some students work in Physical Therapy or X-Ray rooms, while others feed patients or entertain children who are hospitalized. In these ways, girls are able to serve people today while also learning about the career they may enter in future years.

Getting an early start in educational training they will soon have in college, F.T.A. members learn about methods and attitudes of modern teaching during their meetings. At monthly dinners, teachers in all fields speak to them about the techniques and "tricks" of their vocation. For a view of higher academic surroundings members slated trips to Fredonia College and Jamestown Community College this year. In the spring, they visited other schools in the city on Teacherette Day. This opportunity demonstrated their potential abilities as instructors, since most had a chance to teach younger pupils as a part of the experience.

As an interesting finale to the year's activities, the mathematicians planned a tour of a computer institute.

F.H.A. Members Active As They Learn Household Arts

Members of the Jamestown chapter of Future Homemakers of America had a busy year as they learned a great deal about sewing, cooking, and home decorating in their meetings. In addition, they met twice with other chapters in the district for special meetings. Their scrapbook was filled with memories of enjoyable moments spent at the Fall F.H.A. Rally in Delevan-Machias and the spring meeting held here in town. Two other big events which highlighted the year were teas given for mothers of members and for J.H.S. teachers.

Exchange Program Aided By A.F.S. Club

A.F.S. Club, much larger in size than in past years, was also much busier this year than ever before. With two foreign students attending J.H.S. this year and two local teenagers on exchange visits in foreign nations, interest in the American Field Service was bound to grow. This more wide-spread support of the program made all A.F.S. Club projects big successes. The annual Pizza Sale in October involved many students. Selling door-to-door all day, the teens made money for the exchange program as well as competing among themselves. Christine Carlson, the high salesman for the day, was awarded a $25 bond by the Galore Pizza Company.

Smaller pizzas were the main attraction of an in-school bake sale held later in the year. Members also sponsored a December sale of baked goods to raise money for gifts for our visiting students. In February, they sponsored a reception for Lucy Segovia, student from Ecuador, who was spending a week here. The A.F.S. Club year was a busy one, spent in activity that promoted well the exchange student program.

French Club Members Plan Quebec Trip

Jill Finch leads discussion on the plans of French Club for a summer trip.

Interested in further developing their background in French language and customs, French Club members have planned a summer trip to the French-speaking Canadian province of Quebec. To financially support this trip, they have been kept busy selling J.H.S. pennants, conducting several car washes and having a dance. In addition to planning their trip, club members have viewed a number of slides of France. One group of these pictures was taken by Miss Emma Barber, head of the Language Department, and the other set by Evelyne Oudart, foreign exchange student from France. Evelyne has been a great asset to the club this year. Her first-hand accounts of French life have included much interesting information, and she has taught the group French songs.

European Speakers Visit German Club

As they study the German language in school, interest in the customs of Germany arises in students' minds. German Club gives them a chance to learn more about the nation itself as they listen to speeches by people who are familiar with its history and traditions. This year Evelyne Oudart, French student who also speaks German, spoke to the club members about modern-day Europe. Also, Herr Heinemann, club adviser, showed slides of his summer trip through Germany and other European lands.

"Mexico!" Is Byword For Spanish Linguists

This year the Spanish Club centered its activity around plans for a summertime trip to Mexico. Money for the traveling costs has been raised via car washes, a bake sale, and dance. Also, members offered Christmas napkins for sale during the holiday season.

In their gatherings, club members learn about many phases of Spanish life. This study provides many chances for fun, including such affairs as a Three Kings' Day party held this year. Complete with the traditional Spanish "pinata" and refreshments, members had an entertaining time as they celebrated the holidays "in the Spanish tradition."

Steve Larson hoses down one of the many cars washed by Spanish Club as they earned money for a Mexican trip.

Teen Jays Present Saturday A.M. Program

On the air, Rick Pearson welcomes listeners to the Teen Jays show.

J.H.S. students belonging to Teen Jays went into their third year of regular radio programming last autumn. Each Saturday morning, they present their show at 10:00 A.M. over Radio W.K.S.N. Students handle both announcing and engineering in the studio while they are on the air. Each person in the club goes before the microphone from time to time, and must prepare all of his own material.

Among the special programs included in the broadcasters' agenda this year were a show on Thanksgiving customs, one about worldwide Christmas traditions, and a discussion on the effects of teenage smoking. Regular features include sports reports by Warren Lundmark, and interviews with leaders of school organizations that are planning special events.

W.J.H.S. are the call letters of one radio station with which all students at J.H.S. are familiar. In-school announcements three mornings a week are provided by the staff members of W.J.H.S.—the high school Radio Club.

In addition to announcements, Radio Club engineers provide sound effects for school plays, microphones and amplifiers for lectures and meetings, and music for all dances. On Saturday afternoons, spokesmen for the group welcome listeners of Radio W.J.T.N. to an hour-long program, "The Voice of J.H.S." The program features interviews with students and teachers about school activities and policies. Also included are announcements of upcoming school events, along with recorded music. This year a satire in serial form, "The Man from F.I.N.K.L.E." was introduced by club member Jim Blake, who writes the weekly script.

With their show and multiple school activities, Radio Club is one of the busiest groups at J.H.S. Their many services are an important part of school life.

Dick Bingham, Mike Darroch, and Rich Riggle set up a prop for the Junior Class Play.

Painting new backgrounds, arranging large amounts of props on stage, and making plans for special lighting effects, the Stage Crew puts in many hours of work before the curtain rises on each J.H.S. dramatic production. The boys on the backstage staff work steadily as they follow the progress of each play from earliest rehearsal to final presentation before the footlights.

This year crew members faced more difficult tasks than usual, since two of three plays required the construction of two or more settings. More use of the spotlight was also required because of this situation. Learning through experience, the boys were able to handle capably the problems in these departments. J.H.S. dramatic productions continued to run smoothly in the hands of the stage manager and his assistants.

Thespians Honor Dramatics Leaders

Thespians, national honor society for high school actors, gained thirty new members at J.H.S. this year. Those students who had worked long hours on school dramatic productions received applications; then listed their acting experience. From those with the most outstanding records, new members of the group were chosen. The theater fans who belong to the organization are able to share ideas as they discuss new stage productions among themselves.

Three models appear on stage during the Decca Club style show.

The J.H.S. auditorium became a drawing point for clothes-minded persons, when Decca Club members presented their style show November 25. Formals and everyday outfits, as well as sports clothes, were modeled by girls from all three classes. Decca Club leaders conducted the show, handling rehearsals, makeup work, and moderating duties. After the show's conclusion, members held a dance in the gym.

Money from this affair and other club projects was used to send J.H.S. contestants to Decca Club competition throughout the state. At the district contest in Hornell, Sharon Larson took first place honors in sales demonstration and Ray Harrison third in display judging. These two later went on to compete in the statewide meet at the Concord Hotel in the Catskills.

Chuck Sciascia, John Brady, and Steve Benson meet in the cafeteria for a Wednesday morning Key Club meeting.

Even before the school year began, J.H.S. Key Club had one of its members involved in major activities. John Sixbey, local club president, was one of several from New York State who attended the International Key Club Convention last July in Dallas, Texas. He was also able to tour the southern states with other convention-goers.

An important goal of the local Key Club chapter this year was making students aware of laws and the need for their enforcement. They distributed copies of the pamphlet You and the Law to all Social Studies and Business Law classes. In April, they presented a program on the same theme. This presentation included a "mock trial" with club members playing the roles of accused and plaintiffs, judge and jury. Also, speeches by local businessmen and jurists were given.

Boys in Key Club also gave a boost to special service campaigns this year. They collected money for the Junior Red Cross drive, and rang bells for the Salvation Army during the Christmas season. In all respects, it was a very busy year for the boys who are members of our Key Club chapter.

Hi-Y Join In Activities

This year a chapter of Tri Hi-Y for high school girls was added to the Hi-Y group as part of the Y.M.C.A. youth program. Joining together in a large number of activities, the teens held weekly meetings, at which guest speakers appeared and slides and movies were shown. Representatives from the groups went to the Youth and Government Conference in Fredonia and a statewide convocation in Albany. The highlight of the year's activities was a weekend social gathering for the entire Southwestern District of Hi-Y and Tri Hi-Y chapters. Recreation, discussions, and parties were features of this get-together.

Mi-Y Holds Youth Carnival

Mary Lou Asel and Judy Boquist enjoy a game of ping pong after a Mi-Y meeting.

Mi-Y members opened their year's schedule of events with a Youth Carnival, held at the Y.W.C.A. in the fall. The event was followed by a smorgasbord, the proceeds of which were used to support the national Mi-Y conference in Washington, D.C. Girls also worked in service projects around the city, helping at local hospitals and assisting in the Cerebral Palsy and Retarded Children Fund drives. As with any group of teenage girls, Mi-Y did not follow a policy of all work and no play, but took time to hold a number of parties during the year.

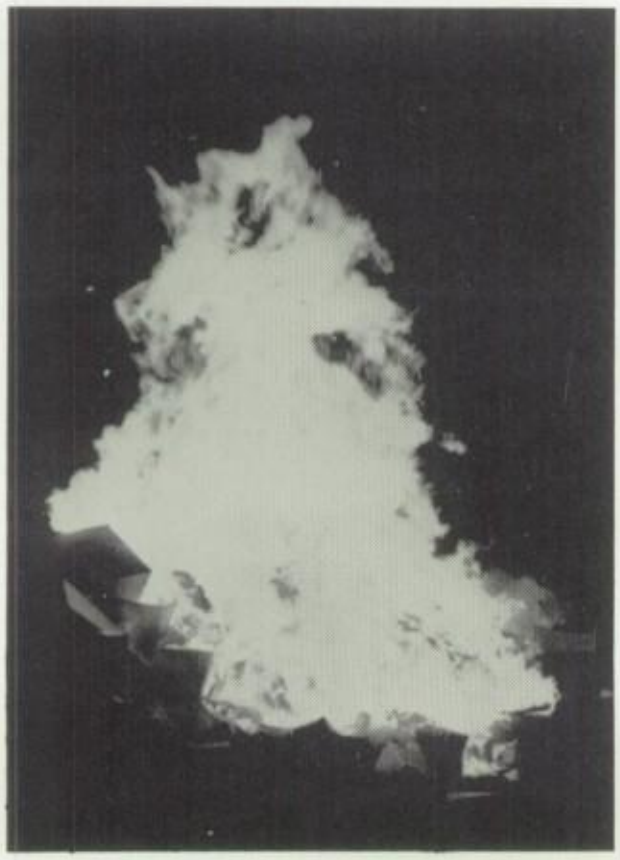
School Spirit Given Boost By Pep Club

To fully show their support for J.H.S. athletic teams, Pep Club members undertook several important projects this year. They opened the year by selling red and green school buttons, which identified purchasers as J.H.S. fans. Together with J-Club, the girls co-sponsored the pep rally before the Warren game. Members stuffed the dummy which was toppled into the rally bonfire, and worked on other arrangements for the affair. Also during the football season, they held a reception for team members after school. Besides plenty of food, the gathering featured such entertainment as a skit in which girls took the roles of team members and coaches. It was an active, interesting year for these avid school sports fans.



A blazing bonfire is the center attraction at the autumn pep rally co-sponsored by Pep Club.

With "magic markers" and poster board, Pep Club members set to work making signs urging attendance at J.H.S. games.

J-Club Supports Sports Activity

Dave Dawson completes another ticket sale for J-Club at a basketball game.

J-Club, made up of letter winners in high school sports, plays a major role in the athletic program of the school. This year they co-sponsored the Pep Rally before the Warren football game and took charge of the Student-Faculty Basketball Game, two important events on the sports agenda. In addition, they recognized the intense contributions of athletic teams' coaches. In the fall, they presented well-deserved J-Club jackets to these men.

In order to view higher-level athletic competition, club members arranged to see several sports events in Buffalo. They attended an American Football League game between the Buffalo Bills and Boston Patriots during the autumn season. Later, they saw an exciting basketball doubleheader, in which nearby Canisius College took on Manhattan College and St. Bonaventure University faced the team from Villanova.

On the road once again, J-Club members leave by bus for a pro football game in Buffalo.

Madrigal Singers put spirit into their singing even at 7:30 in the morning.

At J.H.S., music means more than simply an occasional concert. It is a central part of school life for all of us. 700 students, more than 1/3 of the entire school population, are part of the music program.

The fine results of J.H.S. music training are displayed throughout the year. Bandsmen dazzle us with precision drills during football halftime, choristers make Christmas a rich experience, and orchestra members entertain us well at spring performances. Indeed, music plays a leading role in the story of Jamestown High.

For members of the J.H.S. Concert Band, making music is a year-round proposition. Even in summer, preparations are underway for the next season's activities. Bandsmen reported for field drills several times weekly during the hot months, so that when the marching season got underway this fall, they had worked out a large number of routines. During the football season, band members appeared during halftime at all home games, and at the out-of-town Aquinas and Warren games. Beginning preparations for their concert season, band members lined up engagements in almost no time. They appeared on the school Christmas program December 9, then played at two local junior high schools as well as Fredonia High School.

On March 13 and May 8, band concerts with guest conductors were presented before large audiences. During April, the group went on a concert tour to Washington, D.C., following a route southward through Pennsylvania. They performed concerts at five high schools in that neighboring state. As a final addition to the year's activities, the players went to Eden, New York, for a competition festival.

Dance Band Performs Music With Modern Sound

Each Wednesday afternoon, persons passing by the auditorium hear the sounds of modern dance music, played by a group of J.H.S.'s top musicians. The group, directed by Frank Smeragliuolo, schedule appearances at dances in the area at the request of various groups, and also appear from time to time at meetings of local service clubs.

Members of the Varsity Band were occupied from the beginning of the year in rehearsals and performances. A large percentage of the musicians participated in Marching Band activities during the football season. Then they joined with the Concert Band in selling band tags downtown early in November. On March 13 and May 8, the instrumentalists played several selections for the band concerts. Also during the spring, they spent a weekend in upstate New York, where they visited Niagara Falls and competed in a band festival in the city of Barker.

A' Cappella Presents "Messiah", Masterworks, Vespers

Combining the traditional with first-time events, the A'Cappella Choir made 1964-65 a memorable year for vocal music fans in the city. During the Christmas season, they presented five concerts in town, for local schools, service clubs, and business groups. In addition, two vesper services, a familiar feature of the A'Cappella winter schedule, were presented at the First Presbyterian Church on December 13 and 20. The choir and soloists also joined with the other J.H.S. choral groups in presenting Handel's Messiah on December 9, the first time the oratorio has been given at J.H.S.

In January, A'Cappella members exercised their sales techniques as they canvassed the city selling candy bars, in order to finance a spring concert tour to New York City. Each singer was able to earn the complete profit from all bars sold over his 72-bar quota, and to save the money toward his trip expenses. The largest total profit of any such A'Cappella sale was taken in this year.

On February 21, the A'Cappella vocalists introduced another type of program to Jamestown audiences. At a special Masterworks concert, they performed Franz Schubert's Mass in G and Benjamin Britten's A Ceremony of Carols. Soloists from Fredonia College and the Eastman School of Music appeared with the group on this occasion.

In the spring, the byword was "On to New York!" as choir members finalized plans for their concert tour. Also in May, they appeared in their annual spring concert, singing works by Vaughn Williams, Ives, Ravel, Bernstein, and other noted composers. A full year for the group closed impressively, as they sang anthems at the Baccalaureate Service and Commencement Exercises.

Mixed, Girls' Choristers

Joyful voices are raised in song at a rehearsal for the Christmas presentation of Handel's "Messiah."

Train For A' Cappella Membership

Singers in Mixed Chorus, a group for mainly sophomores, became acquainted with a large variety of music this year. Among the compositions they sang were Mozart's "Gloria in Excelsis," Fetler's "The Drum," and spirituals such as "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

The members of Girls' Chorus have two practice sessions per week in which they rehearse music for feminine voices. They performed "America" from West Side Story in one of their programs, and also sang Persichetti's "Hist Wist," the folk song "Yellow Bird," and "Now Is the Month of Maying."

Both groups had several chances to perform. They sang on Music Parents' Night in the fall and performed several selections at the spring concert. During the Christmas season, they joined in the Music Department's presentation of Handel's Messiah.

The big moment of the year for most singers in these groups was probably not concert time, however. In late winter, tryouts were held for A'Cappella, and one of the biggest days of the year was that when students found out whether or not they had been accepted into next year's choir.

With a repertoire of choral numbers from many musical periods, the Madrigal Singers this year had a busy schedule of appearances before local citizens. During the Christmas season, they performed for four different clubs in the city, singing madrigals, music of the Renaissance period, and Christmas carols from throughout the world. The second half of the school year was spent in preparation for an intensive lineup of spring performances. In April, they gave brief concerts in various schools of the county. During this period, the vocalists sang songs in French, German and Italian.

Men's choral music in the J.H.S. Vocal Department is performed by the seventy-five voice Men of Tomorrow. The boys in this group, who sport blue blazers at their many concert appearances, met many a morning before school for their rehearsals. Besides their traditional spring appearances, they sang this year at the A'Cappella vesper services and at other holiday season concerts. Numbers they sang included some traditional favorites such as "Little Innocent Lamb", but a large amount of music was new to them. Among these numbers were Verdi's "Whispering Chorus", Grieg's "Brothers, Sing On," and the Russian folk song, "The Sleigh."

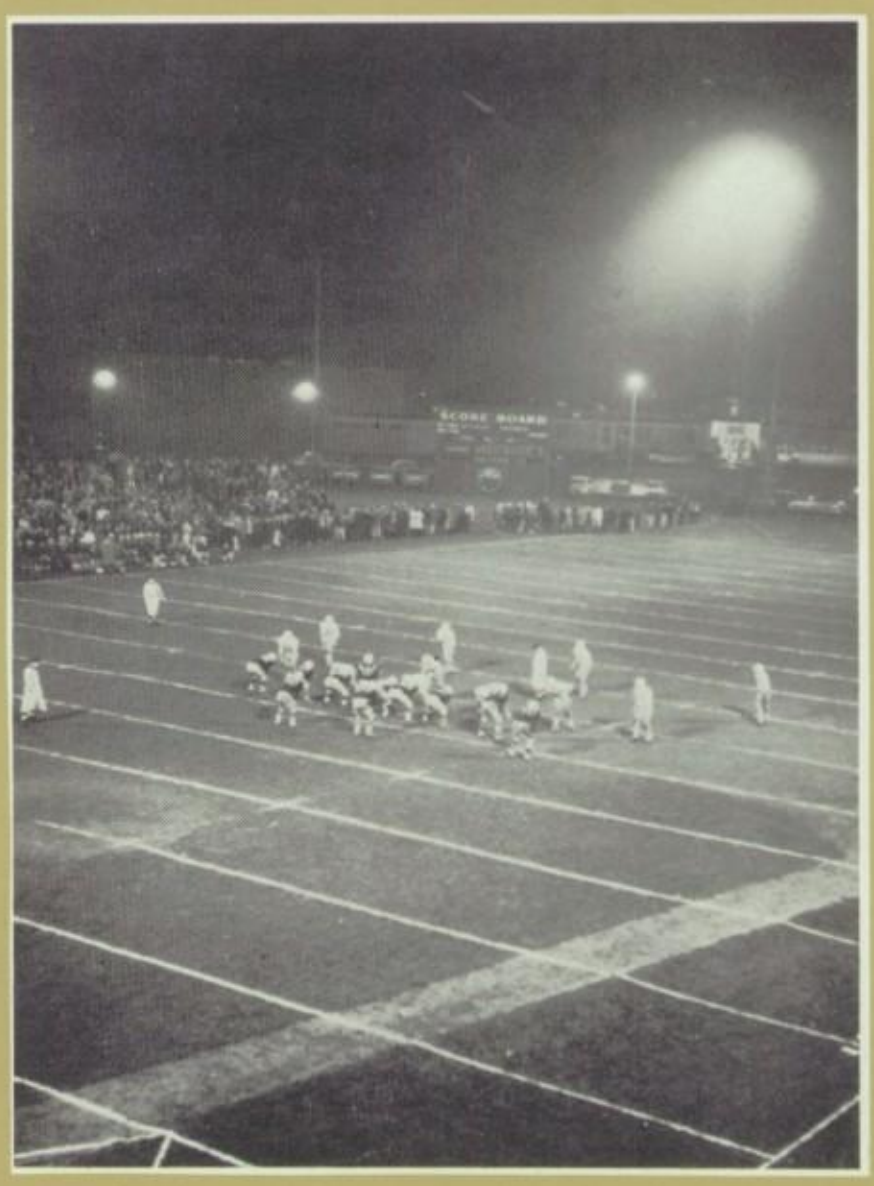
J.H.S. Orchestra members opened their year with work on one of their most difficult undertakings. During the first months of the year, members learned the orchestral parts for the Music Department presentation of The Messiah. When added to the large amount of music prepared later for their spring concert season, this work gave the group a very full schedule.

Planning a spring trip, orchestra players sponsored their third annual ham dinner in November. A large number of Jamestown citizens came to the event, enjoying a good meal and helping the instrumentalists to reach their trip fund goal. In May, the group traveled to Niagara Falls and also competed at a festival in Barker, New York. The group's activity closed with an impressive concert here in school, featuring music of many periods.

The excitement of sports action reaches to Principal Meade Anderson, who watches with expectation from the sidelines.

In the anticipation before the opening football kick-off, the roars of joy when the team goes ten baskets ahead, the disappointment felt when a player is called out trying to steal home plate, there is a feeling of excitement that rarely is realized in other situations. In the stands at the edge of the playing field, school spirit has its birth, and in those stands it grows into a hurricane-like force that can unite diverse personalities into one large cheering army of those who support the "team". The scope of athletics at Jamestown High School is wide, and much of school life is centered around the multitude of meets, games, and tournaments held each year. None of us can help but find ourselves involved sometime in the dramatic, emotion-filled story of J.H.S. sports competition.



An important site to all J.H.S. students—the football gridiron.

Together with player John Baglia, Coach Ransbury sizes up the situation on the field.

Cheerleaders Sparkle With Pep

Our cheerleaders are a vivacious, bouncy bunch who put all the energy they've got into every shout for victory. Chosen in spring and autumn tryouts, the girls work weekly to compose new chants and perfect their routines. At each football and basketball game, they diffuse their peppiness throughout the crowd and boost spirit to its heights. Before the game begins, they can be seen selling tickets and programs, as well as building up spirit at pep rallies. Truly, the girls enjoy their job and perform it with all the zest it requires.

Girls Active In Intramurals

Robin Hoods of the female set adjust their bows and arrows during archery practice.

During every season of the school year, J.H.S. girls had chances to participate in after-school sports activity. In the fall, they began by playing soccer and a J.H.S. team captured first place in a soccer play-day at Falconer. Also at that meet, the J.H.S. archery and cageball squads took second place honors. During the winter months, an even larger array of sports were offered to female athletes. These were basketball, volleyball, badminton, and tumbling in school, and bowling, held every Thursday at Pine Street Lanes. When spring arrived, girls returned to outdoor activities, including softball, golf, and tennis. Toward the close of the year, they participated in a tumbling clinic and track meet for many nearby schools.

From the moment that Dan Luciano returned the opening kickoff of the season over 80 yards for a touchdown, it was apparent that this was to be one of Jamestown's top football seasons. So it proved to be, again and again. Luciano's running drives gave him 58 points for the year, and Randy Sharp and Tony Marckisotto also thrilled the crowd with several crafty touchdown runs. Good passing plays also were evidenced. Among them was Phil Trass' 48-yard touchdown "bomb" to Tim Gill in the Warren game. A powerful defensive team hit opponents hard, leaving them without a point in 5 different games.

Each game of the season seemed a highlight, as huge crowds gathered to see if the team record would remain unmarked by defeat. The traditional battle with Warren resulted in one of the greatest victories. Hundreds of fans watched as J.H.S. thundered to a 33-0 victory. For exciting action, no game could beat that with Aquinas High of Rochester, won by Jamestown in the final minutes of the fourth quarter by a 13-7 score. And of course, another night that will be remembered is that of November 7, when the gridders completed the season by defeating McQuaid, 28-14. Excited Jamestown citizens, both young and old, swarmed onto the field and tore down the goal posts in a display of feverish joy. A victory parade to the school followed. It was a final, wonderful moment in an autumn made memorable by the hard-fighting, unvanquished Red Raider football team.

Jamestown dominated the New York-Pennsylvania sophomore football league this year while recording their second consecutive unbeaten campaign. In league competition, the team ran up a 6-0 record and ranked first in both offensive and defensive play, running up 132 points while giving away only 21. The young Raiders also carried off the first four scoring places in the league. Dave Melquist had 37 points, Jim Brunenavs 25, Phil Carcione 24, and Tom Cashmore 22 for the season.

The sophs also played two non-league tilts, walloping Dunkirk 32-6 and playing to a 6-6 deadlock with Warren. This made their overall record 7-0-1, a fine display of the power which will be available to next year's varsity.

J.H.S. sophomore basketball players really took fire and ran up a string of 15 straight victories after losing their opener to the Panama varsity and dropping a 58-57 heartbreaker to Erie Strong Vincent. Fine teamwork on offense and a scrappy defense were keys to the team's success. Also, their scoring attack was well-balanced. Terry Gill scored 12 points against Southwestern, while Jim Brunenavs and Bill Ervin canned 18 and 19 respectively in the Erie Prep game. Jim Porter totaled 12 points against Dunkirk, while in the other Dunkirk game, Jim Swanson threw in 22 points in just 11 minutes of action, 18 of them coming in the first quarter.

The team's big night in the scoring department was at Gowanda, when they outpointed that school's sophs by 41 points. In competition with Pennsylvania schools, which gave the varsity a lot of trouble, the Jayvees had a 3-1 record. Theirs was a topnotch season, giving coaches a fine outlook for next year.

Raiders Tie As Champs In Final League Game

Led by the scoring of Frank Smrekar and Dean Irby, the varsity basketball squad defeated Fredonia in their final league game, to cop a share of the Lake Shore League championship. Behind 8-0 in the first few minutes, and trailing by six points at the half, the Raiders had a high-scoring third quarter and took the lead, holding on to it all the rest of the way for a 64-61 victory.

Before the final game, the Raiders had won all league contests but one, that a loss to Fredonia. Several victories were by large margins, including the second Southwestern game, won 80-43, and the second contest with Falconer, taken by a margin of 80-49. Frank Smrekar, the team's high scorer, tallied 34 points, 2 points shy of the school record, in the first game with Southwestern. Also, defensive stalwart John Bloomquist scored his career high of 17 points against Dunkirk.

Overall season record for the team was ten victories and six losses. In addition, they played in the Butler Invitational Tourney, where they placed second behind the host team, and competed in the quarter-finals of the Section Six playoffs, losing to North Tonawanda.

Off to a fast start during the 1964 season, J.H.S. cross-country runners thoroughly trounced Silver Creek in the second meet of the year. Capturing six of the top seven places, the J.H.S. squad missed a perfect score of 15 by only three points. Previously they had lost a match against Hamburg High, but the resounding victory at Silver Creek served as a springboard to better things. The harriers soon registered two substantial victories in triangular meets, while dropping matches to Erie Prep and Bradford by margins of only two and three points, respectively.

J.H.S. thin-clads later took the lead in making the "Beat Warren" weekend a success. In a 26-29 triumph over that school's harriers, they paved the way for Jamestown High's big football victory there the next Saturday. A 19-42 romp over Fredonia's runners followed during the next week. After a loss to Bradford by just five points, the harriers went on to tournament competition. They took first place in the county meet and third at the Triple A meet held at Chestnut Ridge in Orchard Park. Dan Feather finished 11th, Bob Rappole 15th, and John Williams 17th out of the many entrants in the latter tourney.

Warren Christmas Tournament	2nd place
Sectionals	10th place

At tournaments they attended, the J.H.S. Wrestling Team had some particularly fine moments this season. They did a fine job at the Warren Christmas Tournament, tying for second place. Five matmen (Greg Sigworth, Dan Ryan, Steve Nelson, Jonas Johnson, and Jim Stockwell) placed in the tourney finals. Johnson and Stockwell were victors in the championship round of the contest.

Jamestown placed tenth in the Class AAA Sectionals at Tonawanda, with a sectional champion coming from their lineup. Jim "Jumbo" Stockwell took the trophy in the unlimited class for the second straight year. Jonas Johnson also competed in the finals. He won three consecutive matches before being defeated by Neil Bateman, undefeated Maryvale grappler, in a very close match.

Coach Norman Thomas has started Jamestown High on the road to prominence in high school wrestling. Each year promises more for the sport, which until the last few seasons was unknown on our athletic schedule. Indeed, wrestling is growing in importance at J.H.S.

The six team members, holders of the highest averages in the Boys' Intramural Bowling League, won matches against three nearby high schools before entering into tournament competition. In the Section Six playoffs at Buffalo's Thruway Lanes, they topped their opponents, the Keglers from Lackawanna, by 264 pins. Later, they captured the Chautauqua County championship at Fredonia. Dan Damon led the way with a 573 series, as the sparemakers came in first out of eight teams, knocking down 2536 pins.

Bjorn Haglund was a consistent winner in the 200-yard and 400-yard freestyle events. Jim Pfleeger's winning record in his specialty, the 100-yard breaststroke, compared well with that of "Scooter" Young, topnotch 100-yard butterfly swimmer. Diver Dane Treharne, beaten only twice in two full seasons, led the squad at sectional competition, where he finished fourth in diving events. In addition, the Medley Relay Team, composed of Pfleeger, Young, Dale Marshall, and Bob Lindberg, reaped the rewards of teamwork as they won a majority of their matches and came in ninth at the Sectionals.

Sometimes hitting the ball directly towards the pin, and sometimes unhappily meeting up with hazards, the J.H.S. golf team played twelve exciting and difficult matches in 1964. The squad was composed completely of underclassmen who gained experience in competition under the coaching of Ellis Norton. After running up a 5-6-1 record in regular matches, they took second place honors in the county meet.

Each of the six letter winners recorded an individual scoring achievement during the season. Warren Moyle posted a score of 56 for the twelve holes in the Fredonia-Mayville meet while Jeff DuBois backed him up well with a 58. Dane Treharne came in with a round of 57 versus Bemus Point, Tom Reid tallied 58 in the match with Dunkirk, and John Johnson drove and putted his way to a 59 against Southwestern. Dave Daner topped off the season's achievements by winning a shield at the sectional matches for his 18-hole score of 78.

Bad weather caused many rained-out ballgames in the spring of 1964. Yet, when skies were clear, J.H.S. varsity players took command of every situation, at the plate and on the field. A wet season was turned into one with a sunny outcome.

The team's margins of victory were both large and small. One afternoon, they thumped Southwestern Central for 14 runs, allowing their opponents to cross the plate only 4 times. But there were squeakers, too, including two identical victories by a 7-6 margin. Possibly the hardest game of all to win was the final contest of the season, a battle with Dunkirk to determine the champions of the Lake Shore League. In a close game, we came out victors by a 1-0 score.

On the field and at the plate, J.H.S. had its heroes. Jim Swanson owned an unblemished 3-0 pitching record at season's end, while Jim Curtis hit the ball for a mighty .598 average. Rusty Johnson took honors at both ends of the field, pitching for three victories and rapping out .393 at bat.

Track team members rewrote a large portion of the J.H.S. record books in 1964. Seven former marks, including some set in both track and field events, were bettered during the season.

Among the runners, Dan Luciano made his mark by breezing through the 100-yard dash in 9.9 seconds, and Ron Graham winged over the 120-yard hurdles in 16.5 seconds. They were joined by Jim Dearing, whose endurance brought him through the 2-mile run in 10 minutes, 20.4 seconds. On the field, Jonas Johnson threw the shotput 49.4 feet, and Larry Ndungi's 11' jump set a new mark in the pole vault. In addition, new paces were set by both the 880-yard and mile medley relay teams.

Finishing the year with a 6-1 record, the record-setting team placed second in the Kenmore sectionals. Jim Dearing and Larry Howie, who were winners at the sectional event, later represented J.H.S. at the State Meet at Cornell University.

In the five days that make up one school week, high school students seem able to fit in a full two weeks of activity. Often in school early to complete homework assignments, many have five or six classes, then go to a music rehearsal, club meetings, athletic practice, yearbook staff sessions, play rehearsals, committee gatherings, library study, and who knows what else before the day closes. For many students, J.H.S. becomes a second home, and it is not uncommon to hear someone say, "I might as well just curl up somewhere and spend the night; I'll be here so early anyway". The full schedule keeps J.H.S. students busy, busy, busy!

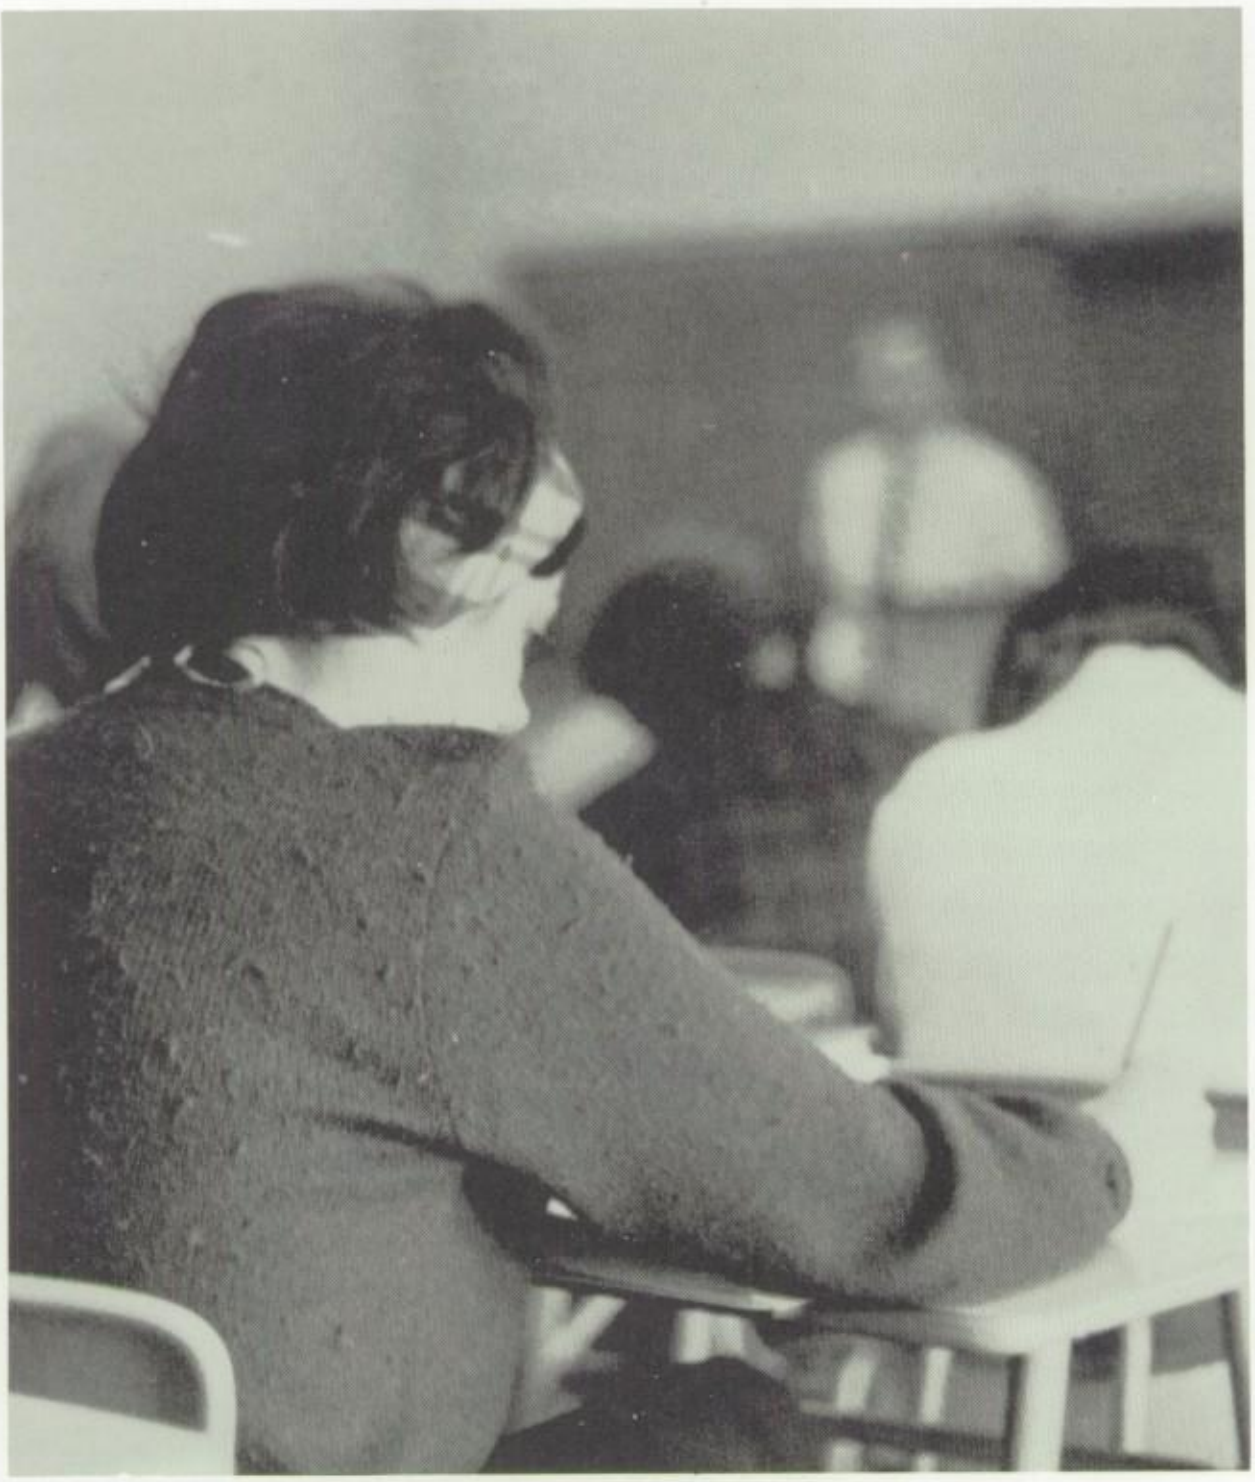
ACTIVITIES

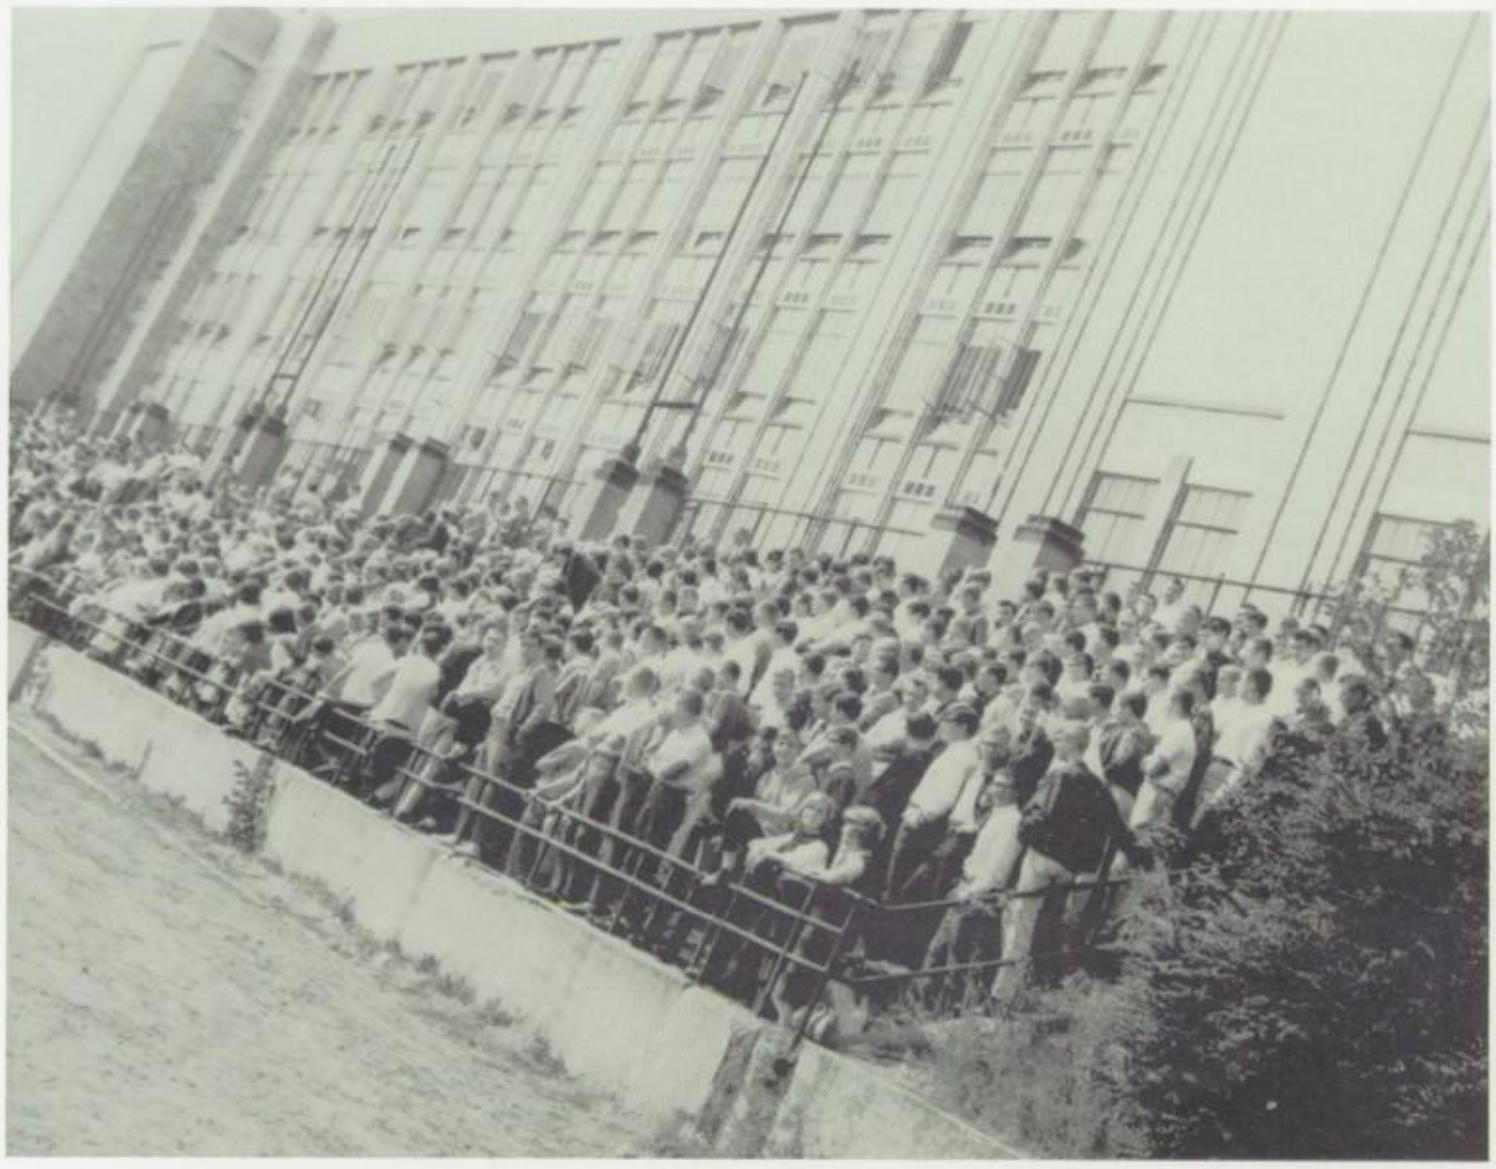
School New Scene In September



Fads of the year were among the changes observed by returning J.H.S. students. Among them were Madras hair bands.

At 8:30 on September 8, 1964, sophomores arrived at Jamestown High to officially start the school year. They made their way to the auditorium where administrators spoke to them about high school and its complexities: crowded study halls, limited student parking, and detention hall. Two hours later, juniors and seniors made their first appearance in school, received schedules, recalled summertime fun, and looked over the new sophomores. For the upper class veterans, there were changes to get accustomed to. All the new faces didn't seem to be in the sophomore class, for fellow classmates had been transformed over the summer. Glasses had been traded in for "contacts", excess weight for trimness, and one hair color for another that "only a hairdresser knew about for sure." The school itself had changed. New room signs made it easier for everyone to find his way around. The cafeteria, especially, was a decidedly different place. New colored wall tiles gave it a bright appearance, table space was much more abundant, and milk machines had been installed. Nevertheless, food lines were moving slower than ever.

September was a busy month. Robert Kennedy, campaigning for senator, flew into town one day and drew a crowd of 6000 handshakers, including many admiring J.H.S. girls. Classes tested their volume in a cheering contest at the first pep assembly. Homerooms recounted or started their treasuries; new romances were apparent. Most of us were so busy by month's end that time was already being budgeted and sleep being neglected.



The entire J.H.S. student body crowds into the outside bleachers for a pep rally held before the opening of the football season.

The difficult choice facing juniors in their class elections is demonstrated by the large number of candidates advertising in the hall.

October was, above everything else, the month for electioneering. All three classes went to the polls to choose officers who'd plan parties, projects, and policies for the months ahead. Convention spirit was apparent with campaigners who decked themselves with buttons and tags supporting their favorite candidates. Juniors made the most of this type of political activity. They split into four parties: The Crusaders, Cavaliers, Paws, and V.I.P.'s. More than enough noise was made when these groups held pep rallies on the front steps. Results of the hard-fought campaigns were announced at the annual Student Council Victory Dance.

The influence of national politicians was evident in the halls of Jamestown High also. G.O.P. or Democratic buttons found a place on almost every shoulder and many avid supporters covered shirts or blouses so completely with buttons that the fabric seemed to disappear. Bumper stickers seemed to be everywhere but on bumpers—notebooks, lockers, even a coat or two.

And there was still more campaigning! Red and Green business staffers trekked the corridors selling yearbooks. Football players battled for victory after victory, and the student body balloted to choose a football queen to inspire the team from the sidelines. Candy Thayer was named the winner of this title on the eve of the Warren game.

"Cadillac" Breaks Laugh Limit For Seniors

Seniors chose the spirited comedy "The Solid Gold Cadillac" for their class production this year. The play, by Howard Teichmann and George Kaufman, proved to be a highly entertaining satire on the world of big business.

Its setting is General Products Corporation, a huge business complex managed by a group of greedy directors who, upon taking control of the plant, have doubled their salaries. When an inexperienced stockholder, Mrs. Laura Partridge, speaks out against them, they hire her in order to keep her away from stockholders' meetings. In time, however, she joins forces with Ed McKeever, former chairman of the board, to oust the vicious board members. Then she takes control of the plant herself. Along the way, the show contained more than a few laugh provoking lines.

A large-scale advertising campaign preceeded the play's November performance date. A Gold Cadillac Queen contest, use of a gold automobile for promotion, and banners and signs placed all over town were wisely used to spread the word that a play worth seeing was coming up. The result was a near-sellout crowd, and a "solid gold success."

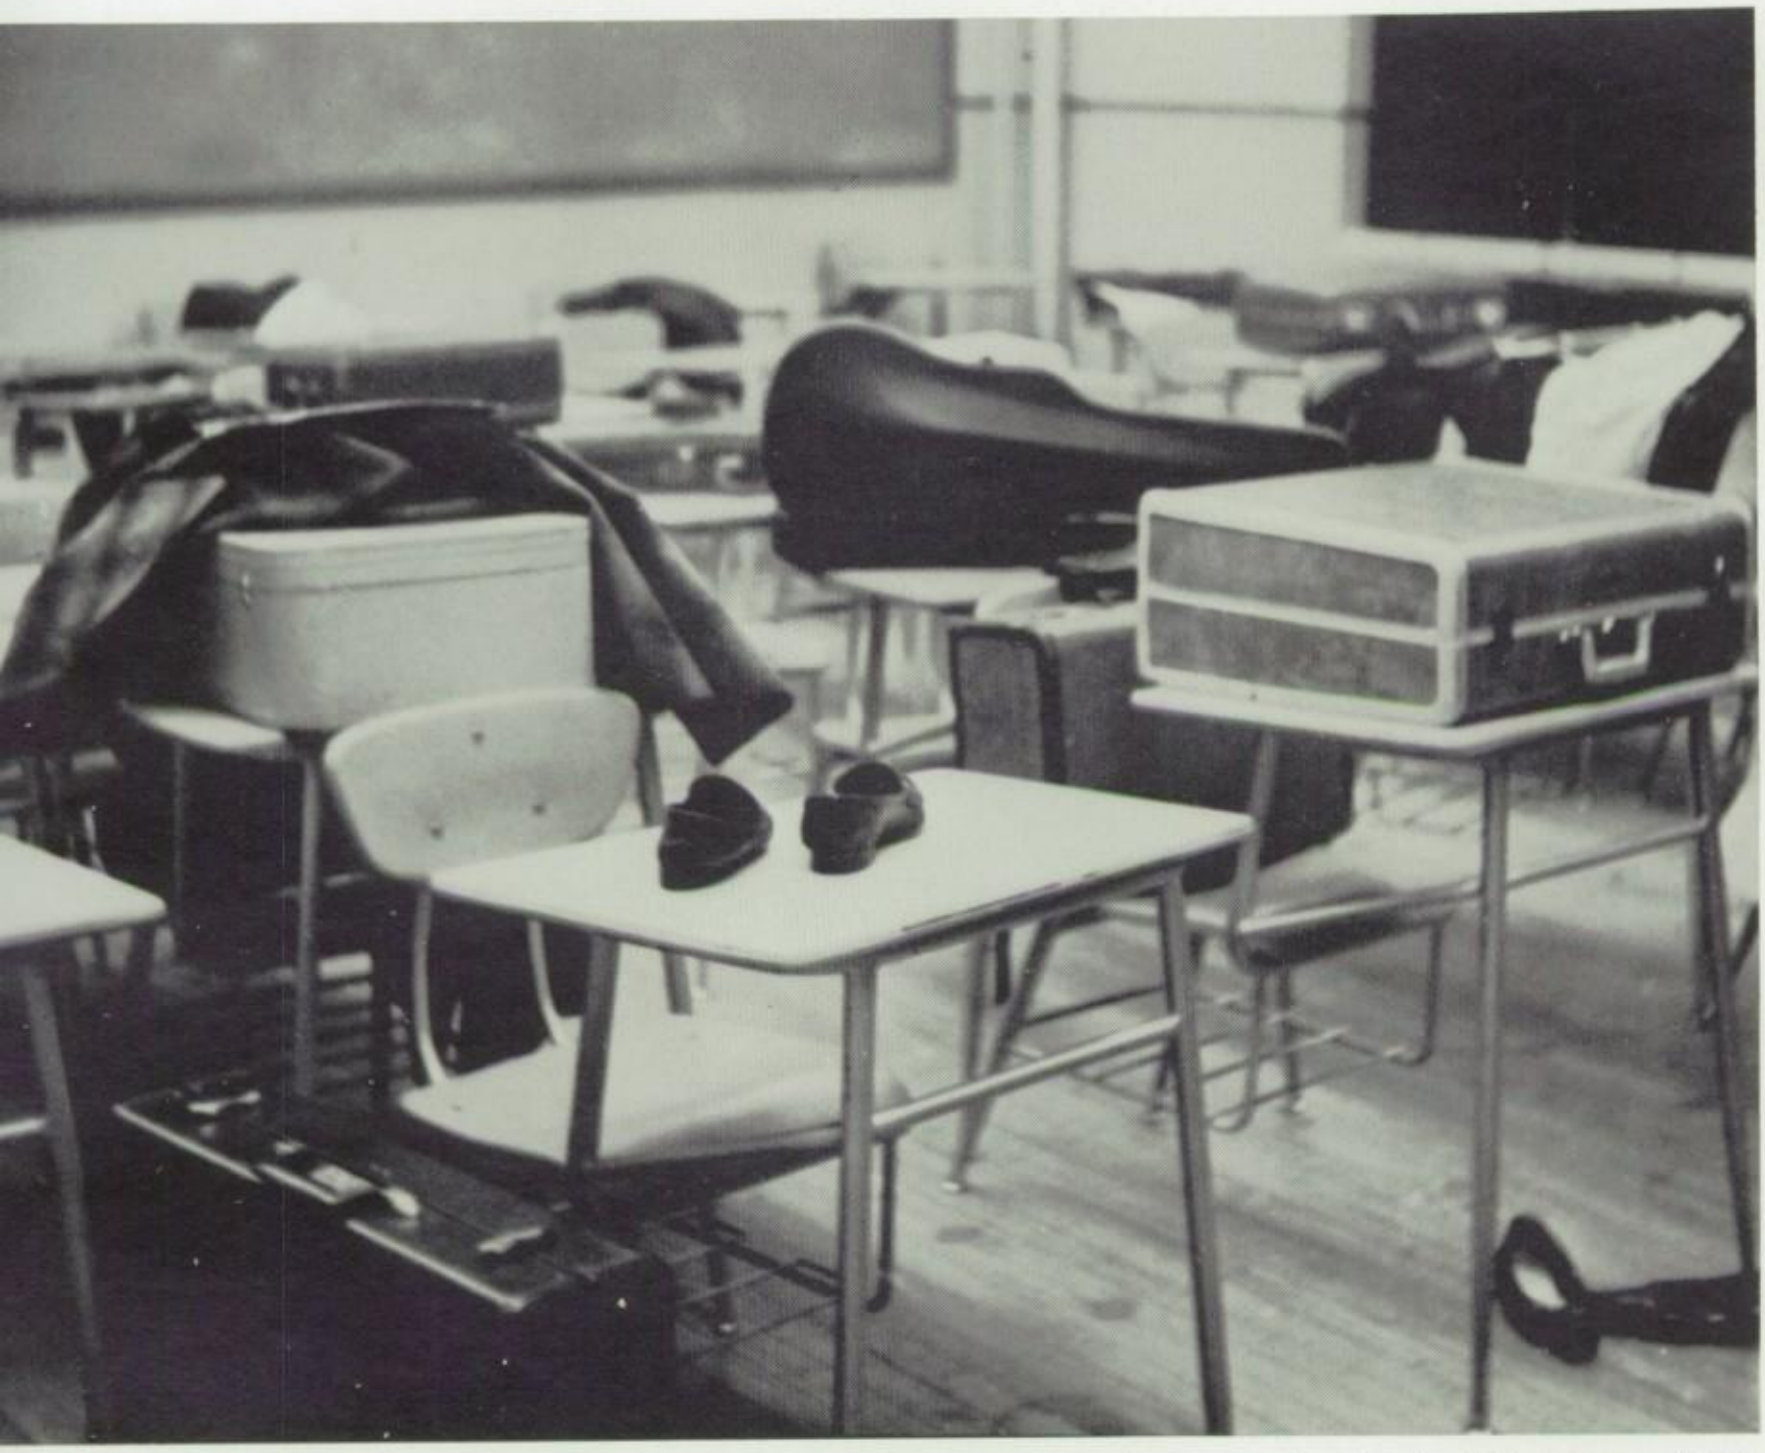
In Eventful Months, J.H.S. Students Busy



The marks of travelers—suitcases, coats, shoes not in use—are left in J.H.S. rooms by musicians here for the All-State Sectional Music Festival in November. The young singers and instrumentalists were stranded in town for an evening due to a sudden blizzard.

In the late autumn of 1964, people the world over saw history develop. Khrushchev's demise in Russia, Wilson's hair-breadth victory in England, and L.B.J.'s election landslide in the U.S. were events that seemed bound to affect global affairs. It was an exciting period in which to live.

At Jamestown High, activity centered in both traditional and unusual events. A lot of age-old high school occurrences were repeated. Exultant fans tore down the goal posts five minutes before the final football game ended, and a group of boys boldly painted "J.H.S." across the state line before the Warren game. Other events, however, were unexpected. Many students offered their aid on a day when school was not in session, by picking grapes in late-season harvests. Reports were that it was a day of fun, too.

Assemblies got under way in late October. Sophomores and juniors moaned the news that they would have to alternate assembly sessions, while seniors seemed quite pleased with their part of the bargain. Guest speakers chose both familiar and unknown topics for their presentations. Mayor Fred Dunn spoke about Thanksgiving, and Michael Tudor, a Peace Corps volunteer, fascinated the student body with a talk on Nigerian life.

As the holiday season came upon us, J.H.S. awoke to it gladly. Prayers of Thanksgiving were followed by thoughts of Christmas, its wonderful celebrations and welcome vacation. As A'Cappella sang carols in the halls, the Christmas spirit seemed to reach out to all.

Led by the irrepressible Mr. Loftus, instructors give a rendition of "School Days" to open the Faculty Frolics.

Lampshades in hand, faculty entertainers begin their solemn processional to the auditorium stage.

Juniors Score Again With "Faculty Frolics"

Those captivating young flappers, Miss Gibbons, Miss Brace, Miss Edwards, and Miss Elwinger, perform a number for the "Faculty Frolics" audience.

"Schooldays, schooldays, dear old golden rule days . . ." sang members of the faculty as they marched solemnly onto the auditorium stage December 12. Thus began one of the most unusual entertainment events of the year, the junior class "Faculty Frolics." In the spirit of an oldtime vaudeville troupe, teachers who spend each day behind the desk showed off their unknown talents to a good-sized audience.

Heading the roster of entertainers was junior class adviser William Loftus, whose "Marimba Capers" and "Rhythm Dance" started the show. Jack Connor, Rosella Agostine, and Lowell Hallenbeck then donned actors' garb for a rollicking parody on "Little Red Riding Hood." Next were the dancing girls—four young teachers who performed a spirited Charleston.

Instructor Gordon Anderson then turned in his history book for a violin and performed a selection or two, accompanied by Andy Cusimano at the piano. As Andy left the keyboard three new piano artists took over in the persons of Marsula Munson, Helen Sellstrom and Jeannette Anderson. Their "Six on Eighty Eight" routine was a comedy highlight of the evening.

The Men of Today, four vocal stalwarts among the male teachers, led off with some barbershop harmony in the final portion of the program. Following their renditions, the Rolland Taft Dancers took over the stage for an old-fashioned type hoedown that will take much to top for verve and enthusiasm. With this interesting feature, the curtain went down on an unusual bit of J.H.S. entertainment.

After a busy day working for the March of Dimes peanut sale, Diane Spitz, Sandy Schermerhorn, Carm Trussalo, and Winanne Nelson count money.

"Silent Night, Holy Night." Dr. Bradley (Ken Brown), Sarah (Penny Clark), and John (Bill Vaccaro) get in the Christmas spirit.

1965 at J.H.S. began in a frenzy of activity. Crowds packed into the gymnasium on January 11 when seniors presented the famed Harlem Travelers basketball team in a game with the Jamestown Y Merchants. The Travelers, featuring such basketball greats as Leon Hillard and Sweetwater Clifton, entertained the audience with fancy dribbling, funny comments to the referees, and fine playing skill. Yet, the Merchants gave them a good fight, losing in the end by a 96-86 score.

Later the same week, J.H.S. students again found a good opportunity for entertainment in the Debate Club play, The Man Who Came to Dinner. This familiar Kaufmann-Hart comedy featured Robert Wilson, former J.H.S. vice-principal, in the role of cantankerous theater critic Sheridan Whiteside. While visiting an Ohio family, Whiteside slips on the front walk, injures his hip, and remains to completely disrupt the family's routine. While there, he loses his secretary to an idealistic young newspaperman. The play, characterized by a barbed type of wit, was enjoyed very much by a large audience.

January, however, was not devoted completely to entertainment. J.H.S. students also found time to serve others. The March of Dimes teenage division, headed by co-chairmen Dan Wistran and Winanne Nelson, was active at J.H.S. At an early month assembly, they presented the film "Strangers to the World," dealing with birth defects, which the March of Dimes is seeking to prevent. Later, many teenagers took part in a successful downtown peanut sale that raised funds for the foundation.

Magazine Sale, A.F.S. Visitor, Make February Memorable

Promises of increased funds for all three classes and Student Council were made at the beginning of Jamestown High School's first magazine sale in February. Working with the Curtis Publishing Company, J.H.S. students had the opportunity to earn individual prizes, while helping to increase the amounts in their class treasuries. A $100 jackpot was offered to any person selling three magazines or more whose name was drawn. For several days no winner could be found for the jackpot, and it was then cut in half. Kathy Seely, a senior, won the $50 award.

Later in February, J.H.S. had a visitor, A.F.S. student Lucy Segovia from Ecuador. Lucy is staying in Akron, New York, this year, and visited J.H.S. during exchange week among visiting A.F.S. students. She was welcomed at an after-school reception which many students attended. Her impressions of the school were very good, and she enjoyed her stay in Jamestown.

Two widely different fields were included in the assembly schedule for February. The Wind Ensemble from Fredonia College performed one day, under the direction of Dr. Hartman from the college faculty. Their technique and excellent tone brought many fine comments from students and faculty. Later in the month, Dr. Jackson, a theologian and official of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, spoke on the subject of brotherhood. His personable manner and down-to-earth speaking style left a deep impression on J.H.S. students.

A.F.S. Club president Joyce Johnson and adviser Miss Carolyn Taft join visiting student Lucy Segovia in the reception line at an after-school welcoming party.

It's the hour of moonlit discussions for college students Sarah Walker (Caroline Chadwick) and Alex Loomis (Ernie Giambrone).

Audiences filed into the Merton P. Corwin Auditorium on February 12 and 13 for what promised to be a highly entertaining play. They were not disappointed, as they viewed the Junior Class's virtuoso production of the modern comedy Take Her, She's Mine by Phoebe and Henry Ephron.

The play told the story of Mollie Michaelson, high school "brain" who goes on to a women's college in the East, and of her perplexed father Frank, who cannot feel secure at home with the knowledge that Mollie's college lies in the geographic center of three all-boys' schools. Mollie, at college, finds stimulation in such diverse activities as social reform, coffee house entertainment, and pondering "true love". Meanwhile, Frank nervously takes up rhumba dancing and painting to ease his fears. After a Father-Daughter weekend and the events that result from Frank's attendance, Mollie's affairs seem to be straightened out. But alas, now younger sister Liz is off to college too!

The cast of 19 was directed by Kenneth Cornell, assisted by Miss Judith Elwinger and Karen Olson. A large profit was taken in from the production, making it well worth the efforts put in by the performers and the class's efficient publicity committees.

Anne Michaelson (Marianne Jones) is more than a bit surprised at her suddenly sophisticated daughter Mollie.

Seniors Take Prize In High School Bowl

Mr. Ramon Jordan, moderator of the High School Bowl, looks ahead to the next question to be asked.

Seniors took victors' laurels in the fifth annual High School Bowl at J.H.S., winning in a closely-fought brain bout with teams from the junior and sophomore classes. The scholastic competition had a new format this year, testing students' knowledge of many general topics as well as classroom information. Quizzing in general fields was added to help underclassmen, who have not covered the same amount of information in the classroom as have seniors. Result of this new manner of questioning was a very exciting, close battle among the teams of all three classes.

Seniors got off to a fast start in the first half of the contest, running up a quick 95 points on the strength of three correctly-answered toss-up questions, valued at 10 points each, and bonus answers worth a total of 65 points. Juniors then entered the action, followed by the sophomore team. Soon the score stood: Seniors—150, Juniors—50, Sophomores—45.

The second half of the quiz session featured a surge of scoring by the sophomore squad. Answering questions concerning sports, literature, science, and math, the sophs came first within 60, then 40, and finally 20 points of the seniors. Another correct response by the latter team gave them 215 points, but the sophomores tied them after the next toss-up. Senior Jeff Loomis, answering the next toss-up correctly, gave his team a chance for bonus points, which gave them a game-winning score of 240. Sophomores tallied 215, and the juniors 70 points.

"Profs" Gain Basketball Victory

A "golden armed" wrestler met a Tiny Tiger in battle, a challenge between two teachers was set straight from the foul line, and two exciting basketball games were played, all on March 19 in the gym. The Student-Faculty Basketball Game, highlight of the evening, was supplemented by three other sports events that highly entertained the crowd in attendance.

The program got under way with a game between the junior basketball champs from Homeroom 305 and Lyke's Lovers, of homeroom 303, who were runnerups in the senior basketball race. The juniors, cheered on by a bevy of beauties at the sidelines, won the contest, 44-33.

In the feature contest, Spurr's Ben Hurs, intramural champions from Homeroom 209, took on the faculty team. The activity began with boys from 209 presenting white mourning lilies to the "bound-to-lose" teachers, who returned the flowers "with regrets" in a matter of seconds. When the game got under way, the faculty took a quick lead, and were substantially ahead by the halftime buzzer.

At this point, the audience was treated to two unusual sports matches. Mr. Jack Connor, language teacher alias "The Golden Arm", faced Mr. Norman Thomas, history teacher, in an arm wrestling duel. "Tiny Tiger" Thomas was aided by cheerleaders and a blank pistol, as he won the match. Next on the agenda was a foul-shooting contest between Mr. Ernest Levin and Coach Vincent Joy, who won, although losing his shirt in the process (Mr. Levin cut it off.) The boys from Homeroom 209 scored well during the second half of the basketball game, losing by a mere four points, 56-52. The final buzzer of the game signaled the finish of one of the most interesting evenings of the year.

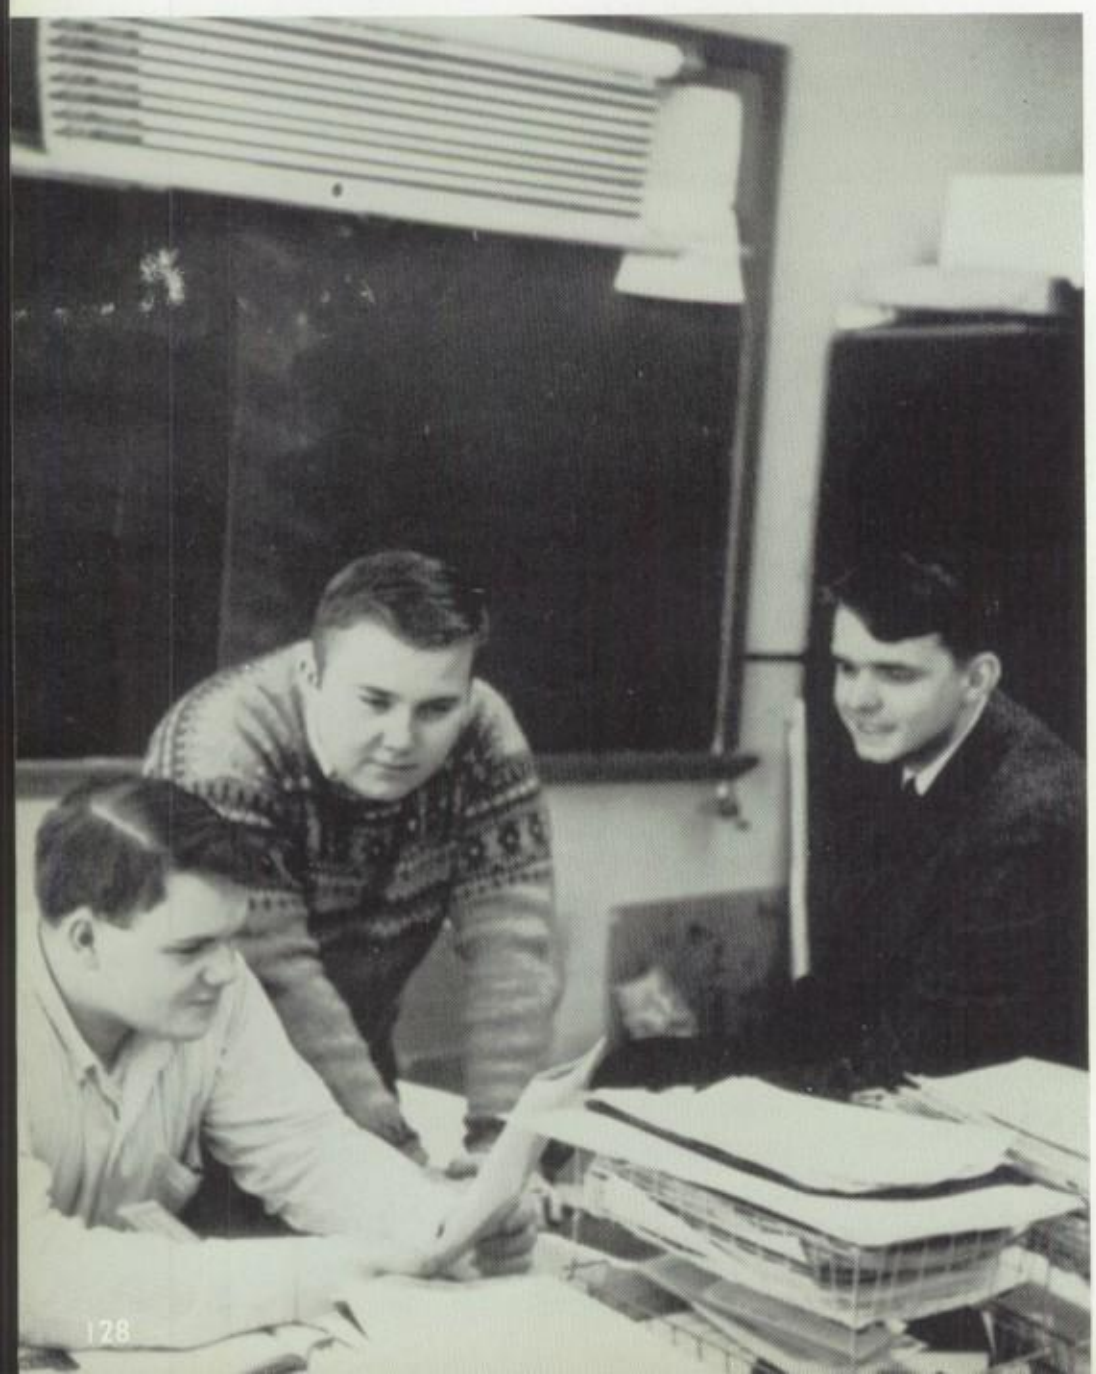
Spring Events Include Hootenanny, Debate



Two special events marked the spring season at Jamestown High School. On April 30, the sophomore class turned the gymnasium into a music center as they presented a hootenanny. Several jazz and folk-singing groups performed at the affair, before a large audience.

The date for this year's Charles E. Hall Debate was May 10. Orators from the junior and senior classes battled for the debate trophy, arguing the question: "Resolved: that the Federal Government should adopt a program of compulsory arbitration in labor-management disputes in basic industries." Judges for the contest were local business, education, and professional leaders.

June is upon J.H.S. students long before they realized it would be. Its arrival has a bad side for those who've waited till the last weeks to study for finals; now they have only a matter of days left. Yet, as always, June is a month full of memorable activities for seniors: Class Day, homeroom banquets, the prom, Baccalaureate Service, and finally, Commencement Exercises. As students go from one day to the next they have hardly a moment of rest. These final weeks are busy ones, yet some of the finest of the entire year. Seniors bid farewell to J.H.S., sophomores and juniors advance a rank, as 1964-65, a memory-filled segment of our high school years, draws to a close.

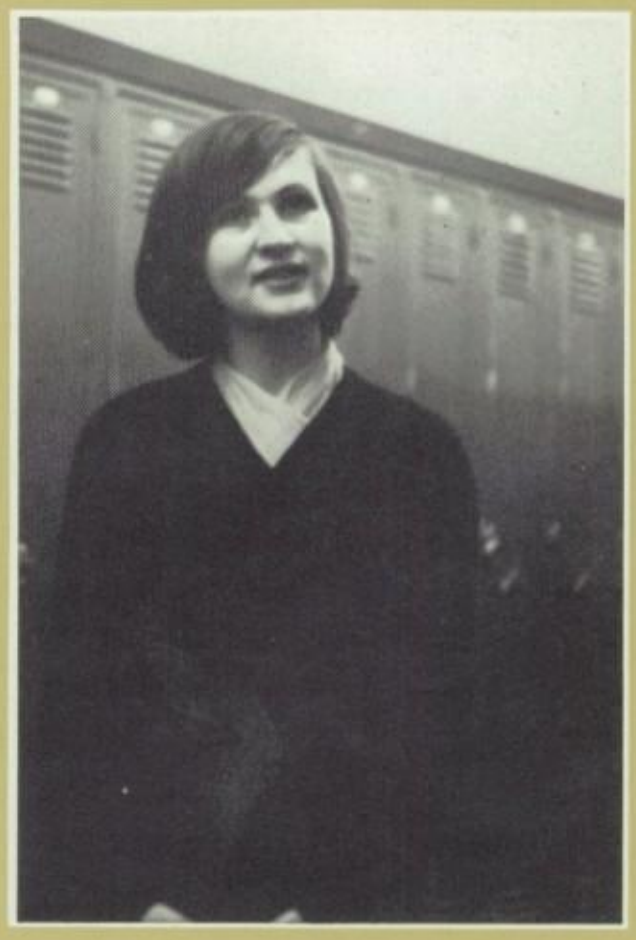
SENIORS

Wayne Nelson leaves J.H.S. for one of the final times, after Commencement rehearsal.



A contemplating expression so typical of seniors is displayed by Barb Wheeler.

The mind of a high school senior is a cluttered one. School work, over-crowded extracurricular schedules, and thoughts of college life ahead combine to make his days hectic at times.

In these last months, feelings of superiority often are detectable in the senior. This pride especially comes to the fore as he marches into an assembly with underclassmen rising to acknowledge his entrance. There are times which he can look upon with a laugh or two, such as the day he tripped on the stairs in view of what seemed like thousands of people.

Nostalgia is a real part of every senior's year. There is in every glimpse at these well-known corridors, every conversation with a friend of many years, a feeling of unity which will be broken when graduation bells ring. Therefore the experiences of today are to be cherished all the more.

Senior Adviser An Active Man

Mr. Levin: In a light moment, he participates in a senior class skit.

As senior adviser, Ernest Levin is extremely occupied this year. Very busy the last two years when simply supervising class elections and special events, Mr. Levin's duties increase as he takes care of many small details which lie behind scheduling graduation events for a class of nearly 600 students.

Mr. Levin has proved to be a capable leader for such a class, a man with enthusiasm and concern that education be a good experience for all students. He enjoys his work, and therefore can be looked to as a person who always will do his best to perform all duties well.

Before a meeting starts, there is plenty of time to enjoy a few moments of fun.

At an election assembly, juniors listen attentively to the campaign promises of candidates for class offices.

UNDERCLASSMEN

Students squint as they leave an interclass pep rally.

During their first months at J.H.S., sophomores adjust themselves to a new environment, a new educational setting. After getting lost several times, they finally locate each room in the building and the best route to it. The names of hundreds of new acquaintances are learned in a short time. School organizations become more than mere names to them as they share in their activities, and difficult courses which have plagued hundreds of others give them problems also. J.H.S. traditions, both the comic and serious ones, become familiar. All in all, the sophomore year is an exciting, busy one.

When ready to enter the junior year, students have weathered the initial storm. They know how activities are best managed, and can readily give their all to the life of the school. Taking places as leaders and workers in a variety of school activities, juniors make the most of every hour. They learn, with each new experience, the skills and attitudes which are most important to good work.

Spirit—the backbone of both classes and school.

CLASS OF '66

WILLIAM LOFTUS
Junior Class Adviser

William Loftus has added to his biology teaching the task of advising one of the largest classes in J.H.S. history, the Class of 1966. Under his leadership, they have undertaken a carnival, Faculty Frolics, "Take Her, She's Mine", three issues of the class paper and various class assemblies. Through it all, it has been shown decisively that a large class can unify itself and have great success.

Mr. Loftus is one who supports participation of all class members, and intense contributions by them all. This policy is without a doubt one factor in the achievements of '66'ers.

Not minding the cold weather a bit, students join in with cheers for the football team at an evening pep rally.

To complete lab books for science classes, students frequently must spend time working after school.

HARRY GUSTAVSON

Harry Gustavson is one teacher who, beyond any doubt, enjoys working with youth. He has five children of his own and teaches over 100 students daily in Machine Shop classes. Now 650 more teenagers, the members of the class of 1967, are in his charge. Advice and supervision are demanded of him in the sponsorship of class elections and events. He must be #1 Chaperone for all functions of the class. Fun-loving, with an excellent sense of humor, Mr. Gustavson finds pleasure and gives it in doing his task.

Finishing a spirited march through town, students run onto the athletic field for the Warren pep rally.

A humorous composition draws laughter from Miss Marsula Munson and Al Rasmussen.

Congratulations are exchanged between victorious class president candidates Frank Costanzo and Bob Arnone after the October elections. Frank won in the junior class, and Bob became leader of the seniors.

PERSONALITIES

Student Council president Dan Lund is caught "snitching" a bag of popcorn from Honor Society salesgirl Karen Feathers.

Nancy Ferry takes a good lick of her cherry lollipop.

No person's name can actually reveal much about him. Deeds and the character that produces them are what gives men and women their own particular spark of "personality." At J.H.S., there are many persons who radiate extraordinary personal quality. Here talent abounds, and many students each day are channeling their abilities into a wide range of high school activities. In the midst of work, service, and funmaking, leaders are continually developed. A few of these leaders—creative, capable, willing always to offer their best—are recognized on these pages.

Like so many other J.H.S. students, Kaz Tada runs into school late some mornings.

BOB ARNONE

Sponsored by the Jamestown chapter of Oddfellows, Bob Arnone joined hundreds of other teenagers in the annual United Nations Pilgrimage held last July. Chosen by J.H.S. teachers, Bob spent a week in New York City and had opportunities to view the U.N. system at close range.

25 J.H.S. Students Recipients Of Special Honors

LINDA ANDERSON

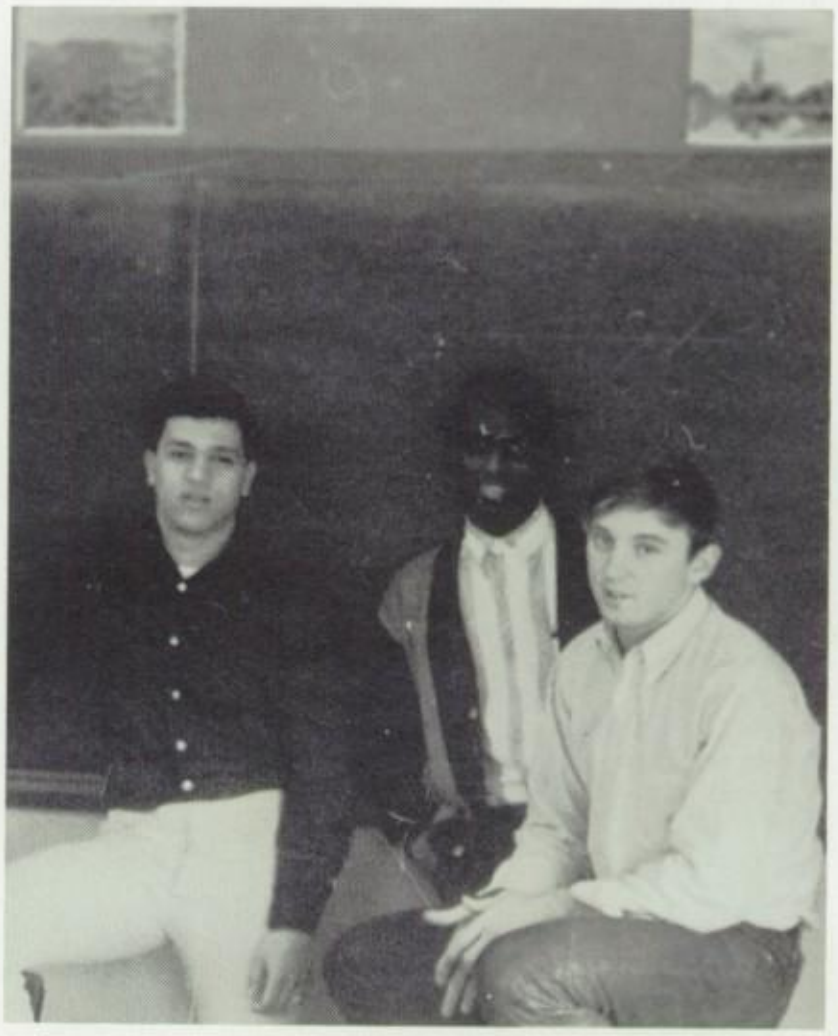
Linda Anderson last fall took over the duties of an important office, that of secretary for the New York State Student Council. Linda often has been a delegate to district council conventions and while attending the state meeting, was elected to her top post.

NANCY FERRY

From a number of applicants, Nancy Ferry was selected to take part in an exchange program this year between J.H.S. and Gowanda High School. She went to Gowanda for a few days' activity in their school, while they sent a student here. Nancy, a hard-working publicity chairman for the Debate Club play and a Red and Green staff member, is also hostess to Evelyne Oudart, French exchange student at J.H.S.

CANDY THAYER

Beauty at its loveliest gained Candy Thayer her place on the list of J.H.S. honorees. From among several candidates for the honor, Candy was voted this year's Football Queen. She was crowned at a pep rally in October and reigned supreme as our football team went out to defeat Warren's Dragons 33-0 the next day.



SPORTS AWARDS WINNERS
Joe DeMarco, Ron Graham, Dan Luciano

On gridiron and basketball court, three J.H.S. boys won special awards this year. Dan Luciano, top scorer on our football squad, received the Richard Mole Trophy, given in memory of a former J.H.S. football player, and also was named to the Western New York All-Star Team by the Buffalo Evening News. Also, Joe DeMarco and Ron Graham brought awards home from the Butler Invitational Basketball Tournament in December. Joe won a place on the All-Tourney Team, while Ron was presented the Best Sportsman's Trophy.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' STATE
Martin Jacobson, Janis Carnahan, Dan Wistran

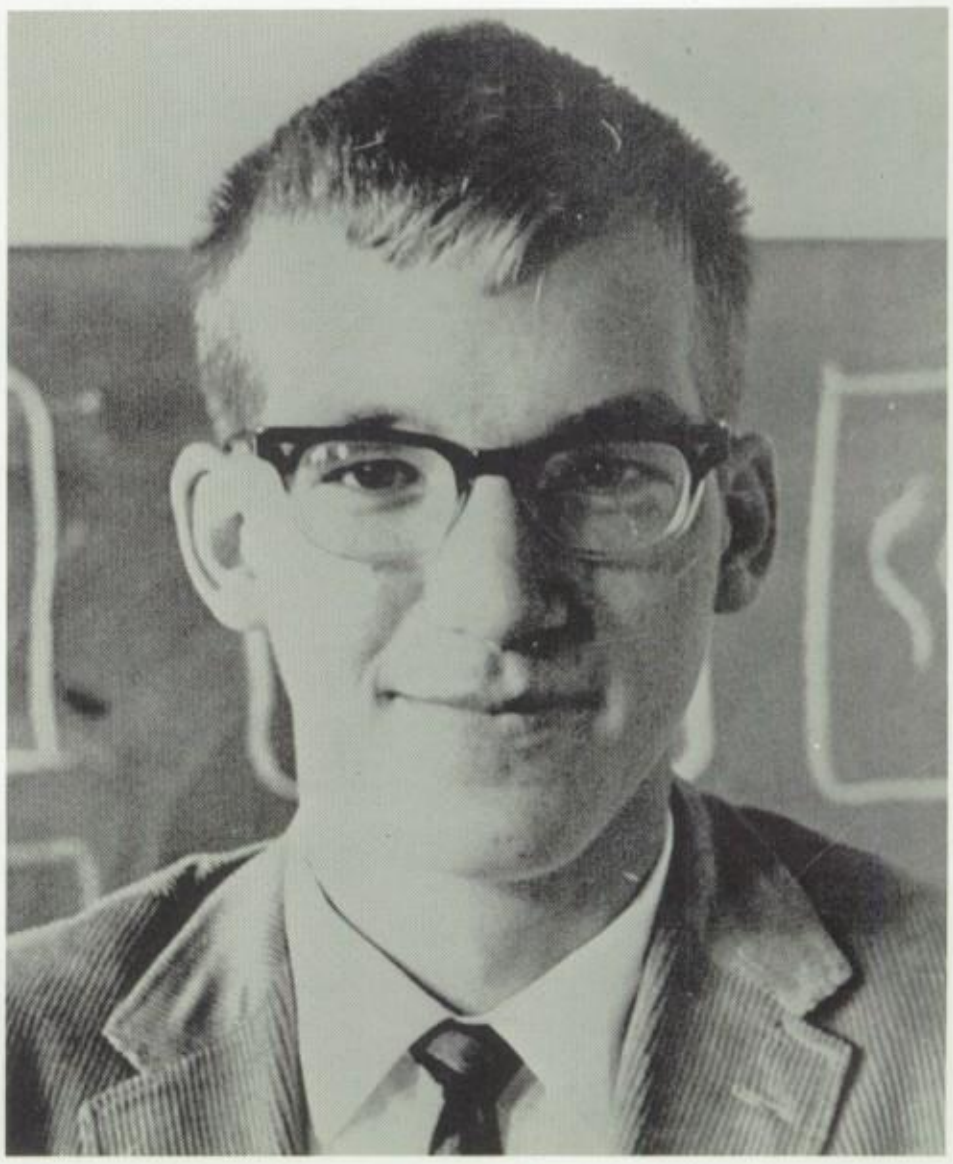
Sponsored by the American Legion, Dan Wistran and Marty Jacobson went to Colgate University for Boys' State last summer. About the same time, Janis Carnahan journeyed to Elmira College as J.H.S. representative to Girls' State. At these conventions, they learned much about politics by participating in legislative activity of their own.

ALL-STATE MUSIC PARTICIPANTS

Dennis Anderson, Jerry Swanson, Linda Widmark, Bill Kammann, Nancy Myers. Absent: Marty Jacobson.

Jamestown High's delegates to the All State musical groups were chosen at tryouts held in Fredonia last September. After preparing music at home, they went to Buffalo in February where they performed in band, orchestra, and choral divisions for the All-East Conference of music educators.

Some Honorees Compete,



DAVE COLANDER

Now living through one year he will never forget is Dave Colander, Jamestown's A.F.S. student to Germany. The first J.H.S. student to go abroad on the A.F.S. full-year program, Dave is living with a family in the city of Harburg, Germany. While there he has also taken side trips to such German centers as Lubeck, Berlin, and Hamburg, thus getting a picture of life in many areas of the European nation.

HIGH SCHOOL BOWL TEAM

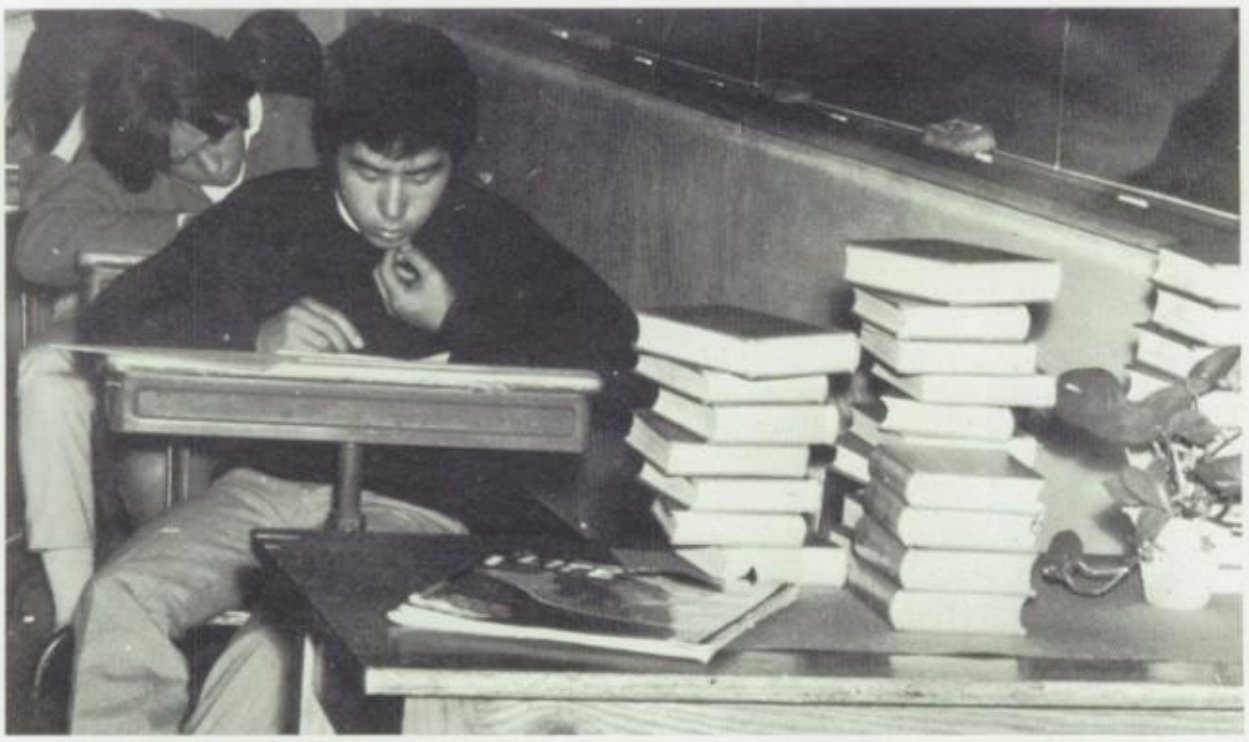
"High School Bowl" competitors from Jamestown High School were selected by recommendation of high school teachers. In January, three seniors and three juniors battled for the school cause on the local radio "Bowl" program. They lost their match, 65½-44, against a team from Frewsburg Central School.



KAZAMASA TADA

A.F.S. student Kazamasa Tada comes to J.H.S. this year from Osaka City, Japan. "Kaz" is a spirited visitor who seems to be "on the go" every minute. His impressions of our school include visions of narrow stairways, crowded halls, short lunch periods, and a small athletic field, but the inconveniences do not keep him from considering J.H.S. "a very nice school". Upon returning to Japan, "Kaz" has one more year in high school; afterwards he will study economics at a university.

Others Travel Far

WINANNE NELSON

J.H.S. had a summertime visitor to Greece last year in the person of Winanne Nelson, A.F.S. exchange student. Winanne left late in June for the city of Thessaloniki on the Greek coast. There she spent an exciting two months with the Boubouras family of that city.

EVELYNE OUDART

Charming Parisian Evelyne Oudart brings the loveliness of her home city to our school while here on the A.F.S. program. "Lynn" finds J.H.S. a big, friendly place with a surprising amount of extracurricular activity. Indeed, she has busied herself in much of that activity, for she belongs to four high school clubs and A'Cappella. In November "Lynn" was named J.H.S. Gold Cadillac Queen. Above, she is given a kiss by Bob Arnone, who crowned her.

MOST ATHLETIC
Tim Gill, Ann Champion

A letter winner in not one but four varsity sports, Tim Gill has been an important member of J.H.S. football, basketball, baseball, and track teams. Ann Champion, active in intramurals and a former cheerleader, is known as one of Jamestown High's most school-spirited students.

Seniors Named Outstanding By Classmates

BEST ACTORS
Mary Ann Bender, Dan Casamento

A veteran of J.H.S. dramatics work is Dan Casamento, who played top roles in both The Music Man and The Solid Gold Cadillac. Mary Ann Bender, who was a comedy success as Mrs. Paroo in The Music Man, also worked on this year's class play reading committee. Both students are members of Thespians, dramatics honor society.

MOST ARTISTIC
Jim Stockwell, Linda Brown

Talents in various fields blend well for high school artists Jim Stockwell and Linda Brown. Jim, a top football lineman, is equally skilled with paintbrush in hand. He already has sold some paintings and plans to pursue an art career. Linda, who is a bass viol player besides an artist, will enter the commercial art field after further studies.

BEST MUSICIANS
Jerry Swanson, Winanne Nelson

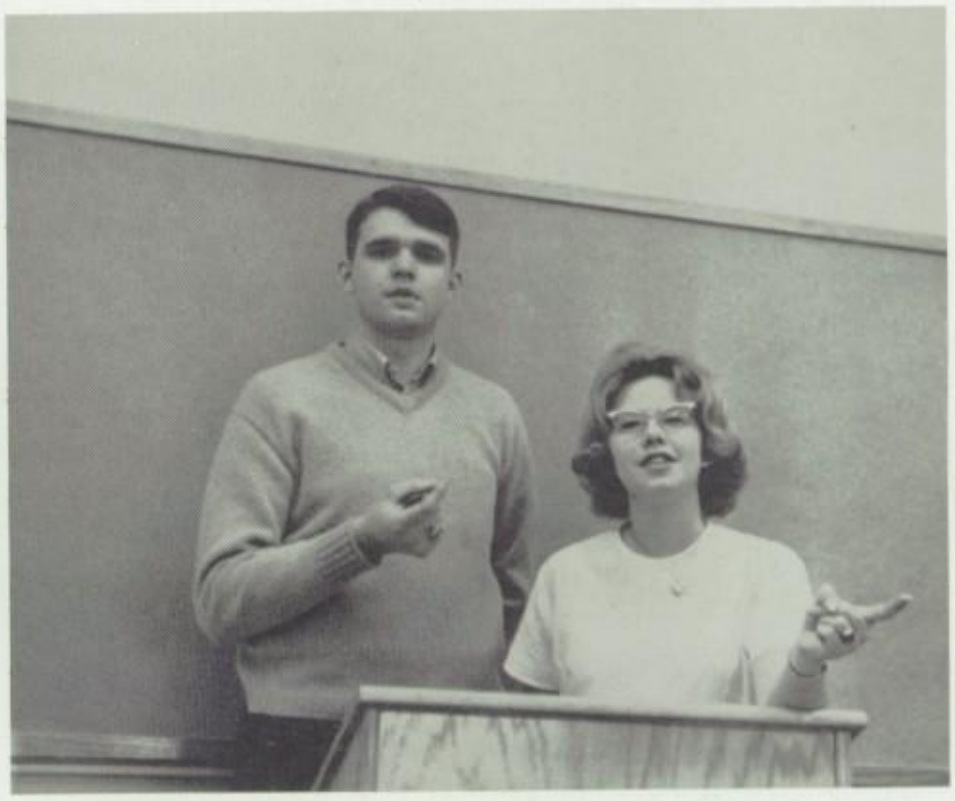
Jerry Swanson and Winanne Nelson have made good use of multiple musical talents. Jerry, band president, plays the trombone in that group and also sings bass in A'Cappella. Winanne heads the flute section of the band, and sings soprano in the Madrigal Singers.

BEST ALL AROUND
Dan Lund, Linda Anderson

Well-known by all as leading citizens of J.H.S. are Linda Anderson and Dan Lund. Linda, vice president of her class for two years, now holds the same position in Student Council. Dan, who holds the gavel as president of the Council, is also active in J-Club and A'Cappella affairs.

MOST LIKELY TO SUCCEED
Janis Carnahan, Bob Arnone

Well-deserving of their fellow students' accolade, Janis Carnahan and Bob Arnone are two who have made names as leaders both in the classroom and in all centers of school activity. Bob is senior class president and Honor Society treasurer. Janis is busy as Student Council secretary and vice president of Honor Society.



BEST SPEAKERS
Dave Rosedahl, Lynette Nordine

An acknowledged leader in school forensics is Dave Rosedahl. A varisty debater for two years, Dave holds advanced degrees in N.F.L., debate honor group. Lynette Nordine, top female speaker, has been active in Debate Club since her sophomore year. She is also an N.F.L. honoree.

J.H.S. Growing As Time Passes

With growth in population and arising needs for more facilities, all institutions grow and change. At J.H.S., the spirit of growth has rarely been more felt than in recent years. Increased enrollment has brought definite needs for changes of all kinds. Study halls have been divided to make room for new classrooms; where classroom space was no longer available, "rotating teachers" appeared, who taught in different rooms every period. An extremely hectic lunch hour made the need for revamping of the cafeteria clearer. With the appearance of more and more students all the time, many methods to solve congestion were tried, including the famous "one-way stairs" system.

As an answer to the J.H.S. growth problem, more space is to be provided in a building addition, on which construction begins this spring. Exciting plans call for long-hoped-for items, such as new library facilities, instrumental practice rooms, and a new athletic complex. J.H.S. students are expectant, waiting for the completion of the addition. For in this program lie promises of an even more rewarding education than that offered at present.

The old dining area is changed to make way for a remodeled section of the cafeteria.

Symbol of a changing school: a tree on the front lawn, long a familiar sight to J.H.S. students, is cleared away as dead wood last autumn.

During the summer of 1964, workers put in many hours remodeling the cafeteria.

By the time school sessions began, a fully-remodeled cafeteria was in use as dining area and study hall, too.

Alumni Association Preserves School Contacts

Alumni Association officers J. Norman Herby and Dr. Harry Glatz welcome J. Arthur Stoeltzing, representative of the Class of 1914, to the 1964 reunion.

Since 1869, the Jamestown High School Alumni Association has annually recognized past and present graduates at a June reunion. There acquaintances are renewed, while noted graduates speak and an old-timers' band plays. Classes of 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 40, and 50 years ago are especially honored. This year the Class of 1965 joins the ranks of more than 15,000 other alumni who have found the association a way to keep in touch with their alma mater.

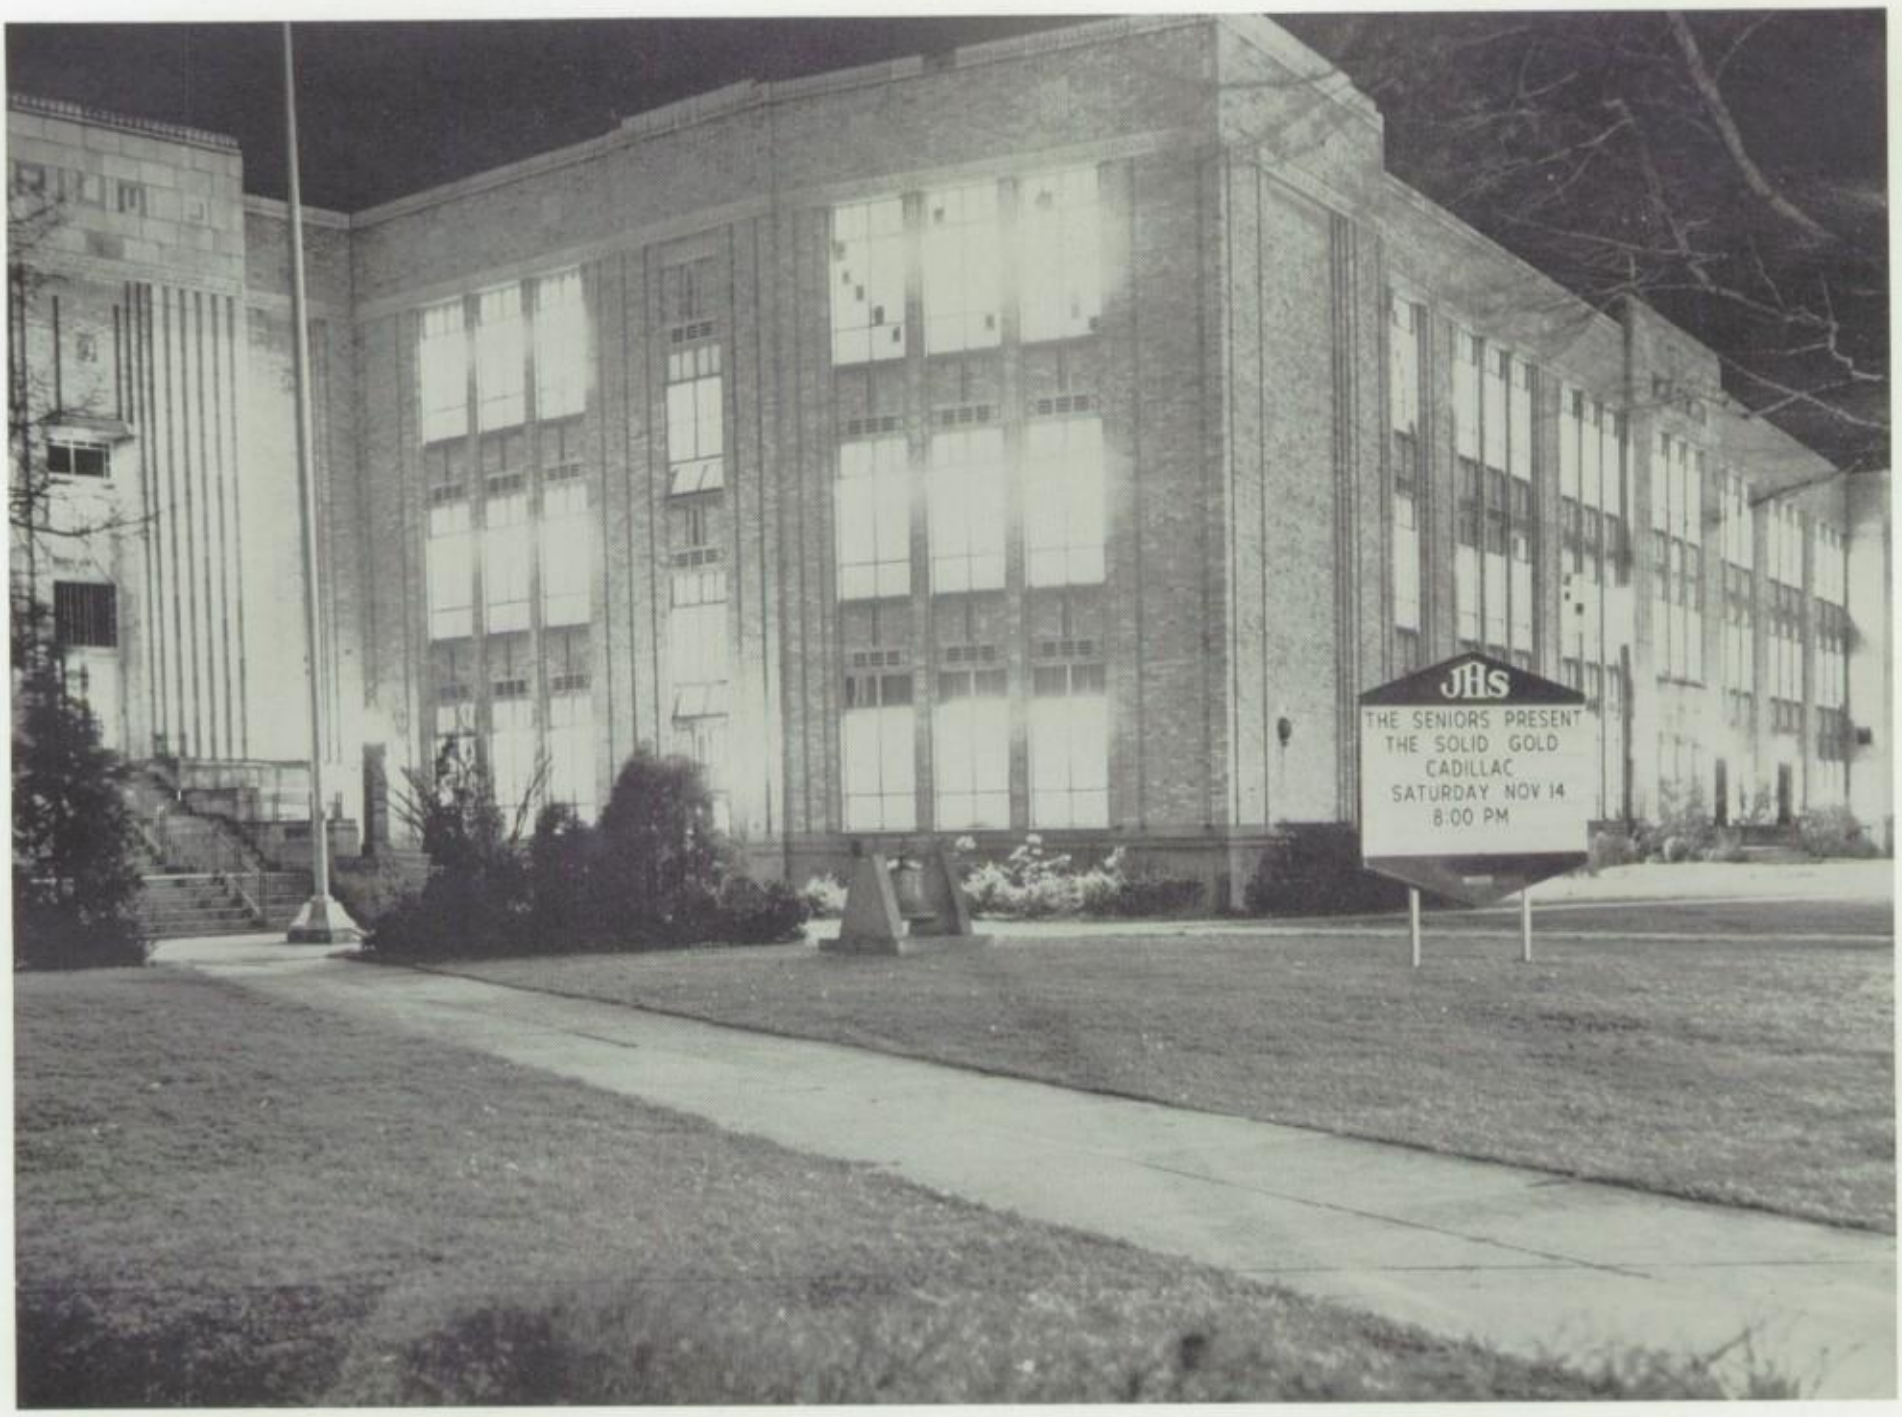
Hundred Member Club Aids Top Graduate

Since its inception in 1945, the Hundred Member Club has awarded $100 each year to a worthy senior chosen by teachers and students. Contributions to the school and outstanding personal development while at J.H.S. are used as criteria for this award. Sandra Gustafson received the prize at the 1964 awards ceremonies. This year at the 20th anniversary meeting of the group, another senior will have the honor of being presented this much-coveted award.

Sandra Gustafson is presented the Hundred Member Club trophy by Miss Genevieve Fancher at the 1964 meeting.



Congratulations to the Class of 1965
